MAY GET THREE.

Electors in Ohio for Grover Cleveland.

The Individual Count Is Completed.

Seward Is Elected and Perhaps Two More.

Harrison's Plurality Only a Thousand,

But the Official Returns Show That Harrison Gave Weaver a Very Hard Fight.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 26.—It now appears as though Ohio may have intended to have gone for Grover Cleveland by a slight margin.

The state statistician in Columbus last night completed the election count upon individual presidential electors. It shows that Lorenzo D. Vickers, the republican elector for the Eleventh district, is defeated by James P. Seward, whose name appears first on the list of democratic electors. Seward received 404,115 votes and Vickers 402,399.

It is thought the reason why Seward obtained so many votes more than his democratic fellow electors lies in the Australian ballot plan in use in Ohio.

To vote a straight democratic ticket under this plan formerly, it was necessary only to place a cross opposite the name "democratic ticket" at the head of the list of candidates. This year, owing to the tendency of voters to drop down one line in their marking and designate the name of the first candidate, thus erroneously voting only for him, the law was amended to direct that the crosses for straight tickets must be placed in circles printed for the purpose at the tops of the ballots.

It was feared from the first that many would neglect to comply with the new regulation and would place their marks at the side of the ticket at the top, thinking to vote it straight. Seward's election is taken as evidence that this error was made by many voters in Ohio.

It is argued that the cross was placed beside his name by many who supposed they were voting the straight democratic ticket, whereas they were only voting for him. If this be the fact, though it can never be proven, enough voters in Ohio desired to vote for Grover Cleveland to carry the state by the plurality that Seward got.

The abstracts of five counties have been sent back for correction and it is possible that they may imperil two other republican electors, L. M. Stark of the Twentieth district, and Luther Allen, of the Twenty-first, whose margin of plurality is slight.

The vote on electors was as follows:

Lorenzo Danforth, R.	405,187
Myron T. Herrick, R.	402,706
John B. Mosby, R.	402,495
Max Burgheim, R.	402,518

TO DROP THE CASES.

Homestead Men Not to Be Prosecuted.

Believed That the Critchlow Case Has Opened the Eyes of the Carnegies.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 26.—It is said that the Homestead trials will all be discontinued.

Lawyer Argo, one of the Homestead men's counsel, returned to Sioux City last night. Yesterday afternoon he said he was given to understand that all the Homestead cases on the calendar would be dropped. He was not positive this would be done, but his colleague, Mr. Erwin, will remain longer.

"If the cases should come up," continued Mr. Argo, "my colleague and myself will be here to lend our aid and to push with vigor the indictments on the other side. We are paid nothing but our expenses. I think we would give Mr. Frick the worst wrestling match he ever had."

BANK ROBBERS.

Three Men Captured in Central Oregon.

They Are Believed to Be the Men Who Went Through the Roslyn, Wash., Bank.

Tacoma, Wash., Nov. 26.—Three of the five robbers who robbed the Roslyn, Wash., bank of $10,000 September 24, were captured yesterday in the Cascade mountains in the central part of Oregon. The prisoners have been fully identified by the bank officials. They give their names as Peter Malcomb, John Huntington and Halstead Smith. They are believed to be the same men who robbed the banks at Dalles and La Grande, Ore., during the past year.

SENATOR KENNA

He Is No Better and His Condition Is Serious.

Washington, Nov. 26.—Senator Kenna, of West Virginia, who has been lying ill in this city for some time, passed a restless night and this morning is reported not so well.

He is suffering from heart trouble and last night he had an acute attack from which he only rallied after his physician had been summoned and had applied restoratives for several hours. His friends here are much concerned about the ultimate result of his illness.

FINDLAY.

Findlay, Nov. 26.—(Special.)—The site is being cleared for the new Marvin opera house.

Mr. Fred M. Neipling was united in marriage yesterday to Miss Lennia White.

John Goggie, of Toledo, an employe of the Libbey Glass works, was happily married yesterday to Miss Mary Powers. They will make Toledo their future home.

Grand Patriarch E. B. Combly, of Cleveland, and Grand Scribe Anderson, of Dayton, were the guests of Golden Rule encampment, I. O. O. F. last night. Ten new members were taken in.

The Buckeye Pipe line will soon be ready to furnish all of the factories in this city with crude oil for fuel in place of gas.

There is a large number of families in Cass township, northeast of this city, inflicted with dread diphtheria. A number of deaths have occurred. It is feared the disease will become epidemic.

Coroner Howell finished examining the witnesses in the case of George Thrush, who was found on the Big Four track on last Sunday morning. He has not made his verdict public.

Mr. Ramden Renok, of North Baltimore, and Miss Jessie Doll, of McComb, were married yesterday in this city by Rev. B. F. Bollen.

The bright little city of Carey had a dry democratic jollification last night.

Mr. Lawrence, of Van Wert, has bought A. Dietsch's interest in the furniture store of Dietsch & Bryan.

The present shortage of gas throughout the entire gas field demonstrates the fact that crude oil is to become the fuel of the future.

THE BIRCHELL TRIAL.

Interesting Evidence Introduced at Bryan.

The Defense Is Introducing Much Testimony to Break the Circumstantial Evidence.

Bryan, Nov. 26.—The interest in the Birchell trial grows more intense as the probability of its close increases. The defense is making the hottest legal fight that has ever been waged in this county, and many strangers have been attracted here. Mrs. Birchell, mother of the man on trial, has been in court every day, and the strain is beginning to tell on her aged system. Mike Birchell, a brother, made his appearance in court yesterday for the first time, under charge of Sheriff Bailey.

All the evidence introduced by the defense so far has been in the line of proving an alibi.

Mrs. Julia Rogers, who was stopping with her daughter next door to the Birchell house, testified that the Birchell boys came home on the night of the murder at 9:35. She located the time from the fact that she was sitting up to give medicine to her daughter.

Witness testified that the Birchells had had a livery rig two weeks before the murder and that it came back blood-stained from a fight one of the Birchells had; also that people had seen the fight in Stryker, in which George Birchell was so badly handled that he bled profusely.

Mrs. Whitehead substantiated what her mother, Mrs. Rogers, had said about the time the boys came home.

Evidence was also introduced to impeach the testimony of some of the prosecution's witnesses.

Richard Birchell was called. "I am a brother of George and Michael Birchell; I live in Bryan; was born and raised here; I am a horseshoer; I have been working for William Aungst and have worked for him about nine years. On the 4th day of May last all three of us were working for Aungst; I was at home that evening; we all three went home together; I remained home all that evening; I know a Mr. Lindesmith; we had some business with him; we were to meet him at Fezer's corner at 8 o'clock but I remained at home with mother as she was sick; the boys came back that evening at 9:30; I was up and sitting at the table when they came in; I get $15 a week; George was getting $2.25 a day; he has got that amount of wages for several years, ever since he served his apprenticeship; I was at home on the 17th of April last; Mike was at home also, but George was not; I learned during the day that he was in Stryker; George Schutts told me; I learned that he was in the lock-up at Stryker; Thos. Moreland, Geo. Schutts and Mike Birchell went with me to Stryker; I gave Mr. Rumsey $15 to give the mayor for George's appearance; we got him out of the calaboose; got him into the buggy and drove home.

The left side of his face was badly swollen, and his face was all covered with blood; when we got into the buggy he asked me if I had a handkerchief, and I gave him mine, and he took his, which was soaked with blood, and put it in his hip pocket; after a while he asked me for another and Thos. Moreland gave him his handkerchief; when we got back to Bryan, Tom, George and I got out at Moreland's and Mike and George Schutts took the buggy to the barn; Moreland, his wife and George and I went over to my house then; George sat down by the table; he was under the influence of liquor and still bleeding; he would wipe the blood off his face with his fingers and flirt off his fingers upon his clothes and upon the carpet; the clothes produced here in court were the identical ones he had on that night; blood fell upon his overcoat while coming from Stryker; we put George to bed before Moreland went home; he was disabled from work for a week."

Cross-examination: "My brother and I have worked together a great deal; I would say the trip to Stryker occurred about the 18th of April; we started for Stryker about 5 o'clock. While the other boys were putting the team away Mr. Rumsey and I went up to see the mayor; $15 was put up for George's appearance; the lockup is north of the railroad in Stryker; when we got to the lockup the marshal was there; several others were about there; the marshal unlocked the door; I took the lock out of the staple and let George out; what he went inside for I can't say. The marshal stepped into a cell and pulled the door to and staid there till we got George out. When he came out he had his overcoat on; I don't know how long he had been in there; the first I noticed a handkerchief around his head was when he went to get into the buggy; he put on a fresh handkerchief after we had got out about two miles from Stryker. A couple of miles further on we made another change, when Thomas Moreland gave him his handkerchief. George was somewhat under the influence of liquor, but not so that he got down in the buggy.

BLAINE.

The Ex-Secretary Is Still Confined to His Bed.

Washington, Nov. 26.—At Mr. Blaine's home this morning he was reported better, but still abed. Extreme reticence is observed by his near friends, and also by his physicians. This, it is said, is in accordance with Mr. Blaine's desire.

WHITEHOUSE.

Whitehouse, O., Nov. 26.—(Special)—Mr. Frank Blood and Miss Lucy Krieger, from Toledo, spent Thanksgiving with Mr. and Mrs. G. Bucher.

Mr. Jack Williams and Miss Jane Powel were married Thanksgiving eve at the residence of the bride's parents, Rev. Werner officiating.

Mrs. Wagner and Miss Clara Hall, from Toledo, spent Thanksgiving with friends here.

Miss Marie McGillroy and a lady friend from Toledo, were visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wilson over this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Duke Canfield were in Toledo on Tuesday.

COSTA RICA.

The Face of the Country Greatly Changed

By Floods and Enormous Landslides.

Whole Plantations Have Been Wiped Out.

Many Lives Lost in the Rushing Waters.

Many People Idle and the State of Affairs Very Favorable to the Starting of a Revolution.

Panama, via Galveston, Nov. 26.—The republic of Costa Rica continues to be swept by destructive floods such as have never been known within the memory of the present inhabitants.

Not only have many lives been lost and much property destroyed, but the face of the landscape is being changed in many places by the vast volumes of water precipitated upon hill and valley and plain.

The foundations of mountains have been sapped by the floods and enormous landslides have filled ravines and covered fertile levels with rocks and gravel.

At Pascura a great body of detached soil, 300 feet deep and about a mile wide, is moving glacier fashion, but at the rate of about a mile an hour toward the river. The vast mass is kept in motion by the flood which impels it, and the waters of which are partly mingled with it.

A telegraph engineer named Mercade and a lineman were carried down toward the river on the bosom of the great landslide. They were mingled with a stream including many tons of clay and boulders and every instant it seemed as if a rock would come crushing on them.

On they were borne, and the vast mass went tumbling into the swollen river, sending up great waves and a mass of spray which engulfed them as if in Niagara.

But they both kept their senses and managed to struggle to the surface and finally to scramble out as the commotion of the waters subsided.

Much sadder was the case of an Indian woman, who from her post of labor on the hillside saw her children carried away by the avalanche, and as they disappeared ran and tried to plunge into the mass to save them, but was prevented by her companions from self-destruction.

Hundreds of the natives have seen their homes wiped out and their little patches of cultivated land obliterated, while many planters have seen complete plantations which took years of care and capital to start, utterly destroyed.

Laborers have struck work on account of the danger, and it is rendered all the more difficult for planters to save what remains of their crops.

The republic of Costa Rica depends largely on the coffee crop. Dry weather is necessary for the crop to be successfully harvested. This weather, therefore, means an enormous loss both to planters, to business men and to the revenue.

Freight is delayed at San Jose and everywhere throughout the country there is a paralysis of commerce.

Politics continue in a feverish and unsettled condition and a revolution appears imminent.

Owing to the great destruction of property, and the large number of people who are ruined and out of employment, it is expected that multitudes made reckless by misfortune would be willing to join a revolutionary movement.

MUST JOIN THE RANKS.

Sailors Have No Use for Non-Union Men.

Bold Case of Kidnapping Reported From Tacoma in the State of Washington.

Tacoma, Wash., Nov. 26.—Shipping circles are excited over the kidnaping of eight non-union sailors, which occurred here Wednesday night.

At midnight a 10-ton sloop came over from Seattle, bringing four members of the sailors' union. These went from ship to ship in the harbor and gathered a force of 30 union sailors, most of whom went to the sloop in sailboats.

Shortly before midnight they approached the bark and, finding nobody on guard, they climbed over her sides and down into the forecastle. They rudely awakened the non-union sailors by pounding them on the head with the butt ends of revolvers.

They were ordered to pack up their clothes and they did so. Then the union men carried them forcibly aboard the sloop, locked them in the hatchway and set sail. They were landed at Port Blakely, 30 miles from Tacoma.

They were left without a cent of money and with the injunction that if caught again on a non-union ship they would be killed.

TO SUCCEED FOLGER.

New York, Nov. 26.—A Herald special from Washington says: It is understood to be definitely settled that Capt. W. T. Sampson will be appointed chief of the bureau of ordnance to succeed Commander W. M. Folger, who is going abroad early in the coming year in the interest of the Harvey plate and other ordnance matters.

TYPHOID FEVER.

Feared That It May Become Epidemic.

St. Louis Remains Inactive in the Face of Grave Danger.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 26.—The number of typhoid fever cases is still increasing. Doctors have talked very conservatively concerning the epidemic in order to prevent a panic, but it is plainly to be seen that citizens are becoming more and more uneasy.

Dr. H. C. Dalton, ex-superintendent of the city hospital, whose private practice is very large, said yesterday that he did not regard the fever now epidemic as typhoid in its most virulent form. Many of the symptoms usual to serious cases are almost wholly lacking. Another thing, the death rate is very low.

Nothing has yet been done, and apparently nothing is to be done to protect the sanitary condition of the city. Expert opinion is almost a unit that the germs of the disease is in the city water.

MAUMEE.

Maumee, O., Nov. 26.—(Special.)—Mrs. U. Lautzenheiser and Miss Nettie Lautzenheiser are spending a few days in Napoleon, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Emery.

Misses Nellie and Mamie Steva spent Thanksgiving in Grand Rapids.

Mr. J. L. Hannum and daughter, Jewel, spent Thanksgiving with Mr. Ed Baunum, of the insane asylum at Toledo.

Dr. H. Kenyon and Miss Emma Kenyon, of Air Line Junction, spen Thanksgiving with Mr. F. D. Crain and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Shelly and children and Mr. and Mrs. Robinson, of Toledo, spent Thanksgiving with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Swan.

Misses Demer and Mame, Carrie and Lizzie Pfeferly, of Toledo, spent Thanksgiving with Mr. P. M. Puhl and family.

Mrs. E. S. Fray, of Toledo, gave a very interesting lecture at the G. A. R. hall Tuesday evening in the interest of the Woman's Equality club. Mrs. George Scott, of Perrysburg also read an excellent essay.

Mr. P. M. Puhl captured the Catholic cow.

Mrs. G. H. Blaker left Friday morning for Detroit to attend the funeral of Mr. J. B. Mulliken.

Thursday morning at 6 o'clock some unknown person built a fire on the front porch of the Maumee Woolen mill and before assistance arrived the building was in flames.

THE WAR IN DAHOMEY.

Paris, Nov. 26.—An official dispatch from Gen. Dodds, commander of the French forces in Dahomey, says that in consequence of the flight of King Behanzin the chiefs of the country are in a disorganized condition. Gen. Dodds is actively engaged in reinstating the authorities and is taking measures to occupy the coast territory of Dahomey.

WATCH THE HEAVENS

For a Brilliant Display of Fireworks.

The Celebrated Comet Is Now Due.

Conflicting Opinions as to Whether Or Not It Will Pay Us a Visit.

Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 26.—According to Dr. Louis Swift, of the Rochester observatory, the comet that will be first visible with the naked eye to-night, and still more apparent to-morrow night, is the one discovered in 1826 by M. Biela, an Austrian officer.

The same comet was supposed to have missed a collision with the earth in 1832 by one month only, and it was then split in two. It was seen again twenty years later, but although it was due again in 1859 and 1866, it failed to keep the appointment.

Dr. Swift believes that to-morrow night, just as soon as darkness has fallen, there will be a rain of fire such as the world has never seen, and which promises to be a most remarkable phenomenon. Some astronomers have figured it out that the earth in its revolutions will come within a few hours of colliding with the comet, but this is not conceded by Prof. Swift. Even the matter of a few hours, however, would mean millions of miles of space, and to the earth on record. It will be of a deep red color, plainly visible to the naked eye, and will increase in size and brightness with startling rapidity.

Prof. Ross.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 26.—A week ago Prof. Lewis Ross, the far famed astronomer of the Dudley university, was of the opinion that the present comet and that discovered by Biela, were one and the same. During the past few days, however, he has changed his mind, and is now at odds with about all the remainder of the astronomical world.

Prof. Ross believes that the present comet is a kind of Ticiborne claimant and that it got into the track followed by Biela's comet under false pretenses.

Not only this, but he believes that it is more than 250,000,000 miles distant from the earth, and that it is going away from the earth instead of approaching it.

Consequently he does not believe that there are going to be any meteoric displays or showers of fire, although all the same he will be on hand to-night and to-morrow night so that he may not miss anything that may be going on in case his prognostication should prove erroneous.

Prof. Ritchie says:

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 26.—Prof. John Ritchie, jr., the eminent astronomer, believes that the present visitor is the famous Biela's comet. For over a week he has been noting the movements of the newcomer with infinite relish. Prof. Ritchie is in communication with Berberich, the eminent German astronomer, and if Biela should spare the universe this time, the two men of science will exchange valuable notes regarding their observations. Prof. Pickering, also of Harvard, will bring his 8-inch, 11-inch, 15 and 16-inch telescopes to bear on the comet, and will also take several photographs of the visitor.

Says It Is Cold.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 26.—Prof. Francis Very, of the Allegheny observatory, who has for several days been taking observations of the comet, holds that it is a cold body and shines only with reflected light. He identified it as Biela's comet and says that the movements of the body are not accompanied by meteoric showers. The comet is in the constellation of Andromeda and is moving very rapidly.

IN TWO ROUNDS.

A Rapid Fight in San Francisco.

Another Australian Comes to Thi Country and Wins Glory.

San Francisco, Nov. 26.—Bob Dobbs (colored), of Denver, and Jim Barron, of Australia, lightweights, fought in the California Athletic club rooms last night for a $1,000 purse. This was Barron's first fight in this country. Dobbs had considerably the best of the first round and looked an easy winner. The fight came to a sudden end in the second round. Barron feinted for the stomach, Dobbs dropped his guard and caught a hard right hander squarely on the jaw, knocking him completely out.

DR. SCOTT.

The President's Father-in-Law Is Very Low.

Washington, Nov. 26.—Dr. Scott, the president's nonagenarian father-in-law, who is lying very ill at the white house, had an alarming sinking spell in the night, but rallied somewhat from it and at noon to-day is reported as a little better. That is to say, there is not much imminent danger of a fatal termination of his illness as existed during the night, but he is not making any gains towards recovery.

STORMY VOYAGE.

London, Nov. 25.—The steamer British Prince, which left Philadelphia Nov. 10 for Liverpool, arrived at Queenstown to-day. The British Prince had a most tempestous voyage, almost from the start.

Aground.

Detroit, Nov. 26.—The A. P. Wright and Ash are aground at Grosse Point.

Peculiar Accident.

Pt. Huron, Nov. 26.—A curious accident is reported by Capt. Lynn of the steam barge Canisteo. The Canisteo had the Stewart in tow coming up Lake Erie in Tuesday's gale. Two large boulders that had been picked up by the Stewart when ashore near Cheboygan about four weeks ago, dropped out.

The Stewart at once began to sink, and the Canisteo had hard work getting her into Fairport. When she reached there there were seven feet of water in her hold.

The F. & P. M.

Chicago, Nov. 26.—Wrecking Master Rarden telegraphs to-day that the steamer F. & P. M. No. 2 was got off the beach on the north shore of Lake Erie last night. About all of her cargo was thrown overboard. The steamer looks to be in good condition and is not leaking much.

One steam pump working part of the time keeps her free of water.

The Canadian shore for 20 miles is covered with flour and other merchandise from the Newburg and the F. & P. M. The people in that region have enough flour to last them for many years. The F. & P. M. will be taken to Detroit.

The Matoa.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 26.—At noon to-day 800 tons of ore had been lightened and jettisoned from the steel steamer Matoa, ashore at Ashtabula, but tugs and the other steamers of the Minnesota company's fleet had not succeeded in reaching the stranded. The work is being pushed on account of a coming northwest gale.

Duluth.

Duluth, Nov. 26.—Two charters for wheat at 3 3-4c to Buffalo were made this morning. The Gogebec was engaged at that figure. The storm-bound fleet sailed early this morning.

Buffalo.

Buffalo, Nov. 26.—Nothing doing up to 1 o'clock to-day, but several charters are hanging fire with prospect of considerable business before night.

Released.

Alpena, Nov. 26.—Barge Bay City that was aground at North Point was released and towed to this city this morning with but slight damages.

GRANT AND WARD.

The Affairs of the Company in Court.

Ex-Mayor Grace Charged With Making a Crooked Deal.

New York, Nov. 26.—Ex-Mayor Wm. R. Grace is charged with fraud by the officers of the American National bank of Providence.

The transactions involving the accusation date back to the time of the Grant and Ward failure in 1884.

There was a deal in notes, from which Mr. Grace emerged with profit, while the bank sustained a loss of $19,600.

Suit has been brought by the bank to recover the money from Mr. Grace, with interest to date.

Counsellor Frederic R. Coudert, representing Mr. Grace, argued a motion before Judge Truax in the supreme court chambers yesterday for an order directing the bank to make its complaint more definite. A paragraph about which particulars were specially needed, according to Mr. Coudert, was one declaring that at the time Mr. Grace had his dealings with the bank he knew, from surrounding facts and circumstances, that the representations he made were false.

Mr. Coudert urged that the circumstances within Mr. Grace's knowledge at the time should be specified.

Intending to defraud the bank, says the complaint, Mr. Grace concealed the truth and falsely reported to the bankers that Grant and Ward were prosperous and solvent and making money out of government contracts, in furthering which the money derived from the notes was to be utilized.

By the facts that he concealed, and the fiction that he spread, he succeeded in inducing the bank to purchase two of five notes he had taken. For these two $10,000 notes he got $19,600.

Judge Truax reserved his decision on the motion.

OVER AN EMBANKMENT.

A Caboose Takes a Frightful Tumble.

Muncie, Ind., Nov. 26.—A bad wreck occurred last evening south of this city a few miles at the junction of the Fort Wayne C. & L. division of the Lake Erie & Western railroad and the Belt road.

A through freight train safely passed over a switch but just as the caboose struck the switch a guard broke and the car was derailed.

The accident occurred on a high bank and the car toppled over.

Wm. Neff, the Cowan Washing Machine manufacturer, was a passenger and was badly cut in the face and head and also injured in both legs and his shoulder.

Dan Tanley, John Sweeney and Mike German, all trainmen, were injured.

HERE YOU ARE.

A Local Example of the Result of Skillful Work.

Suffered for Ten Years---Unable to Obtain Relief From Other Physicians---Catarrh With Nervousness, Hysteria, Etc.----Gained 15 Poun ds in One Month.

Do you know Mrs. Charles Rainville, of Auburndale?

She is so enthusiastic over her cure by Drs. Byers and Dougan that she would like to talk to you about it. This is what she says for publication:

"I have been a sufferer for ten years from catarrh. My nose was stopped up, I was hawking and spitting all the time, was sleepless and restless, woke up tired and with a dull pain in the back, was dull and languid all the time, seemed to be devoid of all energy or life, and once lay as if dead for three days.

"I was extremely nervous, my ideas were confused, there were ringing and roaring noises in the ears and head, my appetite was poor, food would not digest, I continually belched up sour gas from the stomach, a feeling of oppression after eating, heartburn, head giddy and fainting spells, was dejected and experienced an all-gone feeling all the time.

"My head ached constantly. I had shooting pains all through the body. My throat was sore and tender and my tongue coated. I had violent palpitations of the heart, nervousness and hysterical fits.

"Now I am glad and proud to let the world know what has been done for me by Drs. Byers and Dougan when I was desperate and hopeless as to my case after all other physicians had failed. I saw their advertisement in the paper, and being impressed by its candor and frankness, went to them. I got relief at the start, and began to improve right along. Now I feel a thousand times better. The headaches and pains have disappeared. In fact, all the symptoms I complained of have gone. I feel as if a great weight had been lifted from me, and as if new life, health, strength and energy had been enthused into me. For eleven years I have done nothing but stuff medicine down my throat, but none ever affected me beneficially until Drs. Byers and Dougan prescribed for me. My stomach is all right; I retain my food; the fullness and distension have ceased, my heart feels all right, and I am entirely devoid of nervousness. Bad days with me now are rare. My folks say I look like another woman. I have increased over fifteen pounds since I began treatment with these physicians. If anyone is looking for a doctor to do them good they ought to go to Drs. Byers and Dougan."

EXPLANATORY.

Recently, Drs. Byers and Dougan treated a large number of patients free of cost. This was done for the purpose of demonstrating to all who cared to test them what they could do. A great many doctors advertise, but very few of them carry out the letter of their promise. It is one thing to advertise and another to cure. Drs. Byers and Dougan do not guarantee a cure, but they promise to cure every case that is curable. Each physician has had a wide experience in the treatment of chronic diseases. Each is a competent, skilled, able man. They refer to testimonials given by grateful patients to show what they can do, and they are anxious to undertake to treat those who have failed to obtain relief from other physicians.

The free treatment period has expired. Henceforward the price for medical treatment at the hands of these physicians will be $5 a month for all diseases. Medicines are furnished free. Remember, therefore, that you can get the best medical service at the least cost from Drs. Byers and Dougan for any disease whatever, at Five Dollars a Month.

FOR ANY DISEASE.

Their Credentials

Drs. Byers & Dougan ask that their credentials and claims be thoroughly examined and investigated. Dr. Byers is a graduate of the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, Pa., 1872, and has had 20 years active experience in diseases of the eye, ear, nose, throat and lungs. Dr. Dougan is a graduate of the Buffalo Medical College, and also of McGill University of Montreal, Canada, and holds both Canadian and United States qualifications. Dr. Dougan has had 25 years experience in treating chronic diseases of the lungs, stomach, heart, liver, kidneys, bladder, rectum, diseases of women, etc., etc.

ONTARIO CROPS.

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 26.—The Ontario government crop report issued yesterday shows that fall wheat has been a splendid crop, averaging over 21 bushels to the acre. Spring wheat turned out very poorly, yielding under 13 bushels per acre. Barley is under the average in the yield and quality. Oats, although over 10,000,000 bushels less in quantity than last year, are still above the average of the total yield. Rye has done fairly well. Peas are under the average.

E. D. BOLER DEAD.

Amsterdam, N. Y., Nov. 26.—Edward D. Boler, for over 40 years at the head of the Mount Lebanon shakers, is dead, aged 90 years.

Right in your own hands, if you'll take it, you have the remedy for woman's weaknesses and woman's ailments. And you have it on remarkable terms. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is guaranteed to help you, or it costs you nothing.

If it weren't the most certain and effective remedy in the world, do you think it could be sold in any such way?

Every overworked and "run-down" woman and every delicate and suffering woman, needs it. It builds up and invigorates the whole system, regulates and promotes the proper functions, and restores health and strength. It's a legitimate medicine, not a beverage; purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, and made especially for woman's needs.

In every disorder and derangement peculiar to the sex, periodical pains, weak back, bearing-down sensations, and kindred ailments, "Favorite Prescription" is guaranteed to benefit or cure, or you have your money back.

"I Owe My Life to Hood's Sarsaparilla"

"Words are powerless to express the gratitude I feel toward Hood's Sarsaparilla, for under God, I feel and know that to this medicine I owe my life. Twelve years ago I began to bloat, followed by nausea at the stomach, and later with swellings of the limbs, accompanied by severe pain. This gradually grew worse until three years ago. Physicians told me the trouble was

Caused by a Tumor

For several months I had been unable to retain any food of a solid nature. I was greatly emaciated, had frequent hemorrhages, and was satisfied the doctors were right in saying my life was nearly over. One day a friend suggested that I try Hood's Sarsaparilla; I did so, and for 3 or 4 days I was sicker than ever, but I kept on and gradually began to feel better.

I Began to Feel Hungry

Could, after a time, retain solid food, increased in weight, the saffron hue left my skin, the bloating subsided, and I felt better all over. For the past two years my health has been quite good, and I have been able all the time to do the housework for my family. After what it has done for me I never hesitate to recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. OGDEN SNYDER, No. 10 Judson Street, Albany, N. Y.

DR. R. C. FLOWER.

The Famous Physician to Visit This State Soon.

What Prominent People and Representative Journals Say About This Boston Specialist.

Dr. R. C. Flower of Boston, will visit the following places on the dates given:

Evansville, Ind., St. George Hotel, Monday, Dec. 5. Indianapolis, Ind., Denison Hotel, Tuesday, Dec. 6. Cincinnati, O., Grand Hotel, Wednesday, Dec. 7. Columbus, O., Nell Hotel, Thursday, Dec. 8. Toledo, O., Madison Hotel, Friday, Dec. 9. South Bend, Ind., Oliver House, Saturday, Dec. 10.

Dr. Flower has attained such eminence in his profession in the treatment of chronic diseases that he is regarded as the highest authority in his specialties.

While Dr. Flower treats all chronic diseases and possesses every facility that money and experience can give him in the treatment of such diseases, his specialties are cancer, consumption, tumors, paralysis, nerve and heart troubles. In the treatment of these he has no superior in the world. Joe Jefferson, the actor, cured by Dr. Flower when given up by the leading physicians of both continents to die, says: "I consider Dr. Flower the most wonderful and skillful physician of this age." Ex-Governor Bishop of Ohio, "The most successful physician and wonderful man I have ever known." Hon. J. W. Rice, Boston, says of Dr. Flower, "He is the most skillful physician and fascinating gentleman I have ever known." The Boston Globe says, "Dr. Flower has done more for the sick of Boston than any physician in New England." The Journal: "The most brilliant and successful specialist of the city." The Traveller: "Dr. R. C. Flower is a brilliant scholar, with a fascinating personality, and the most successful and extensive practitioner in the east." New York Tribune: "After an extended investigation we are led to believe that Dr. R. C. Flower has no equal as a medical specialist in the treatment of chronic diseases." Philadelphia Times: "Dr. Flower stands pre-eminently at the head of medical practice in the treatment of chronic diseases." The Cincinnati Enquirer: "Dr. R. C. Flower of Boston has upwards of seven hundred patients in the state of Ohio—more, we venture, than any resident physician, and as authority in chronic diseases he has no equal in the country." These are only a few of the many unsought indorsements given to this distinguished physician.

It is stated by the Chicago Times that Dr. Flower's practice in both New York and Illinois is so large that the number of his patients will average over 1,100 in the former state and 800 in the latter. His patients are numerous throughout the south and his practice extends to all parts of the continent.

Dr. Flower's visit to the above places will afford the sick excellent opportunity to consult this eminent authority close to their homes.

THAT FAIRY TALE

Regarding the Alleged Disappearance of a Defiance Business Man.

It Proves to Have Been a Most Heartless Hoax With No Foundation to the Mythical Tale.

The Defiance News of last evening confirms the account given in the Bee that Fred Le Seuer was all right; that there was no mysterious disappearance and that there was no occasion whatever to call forth the remotest suspicion of foul play. The News, among other things, has this to say:

Mr. Charles Harris is an old and trusted employe of Mr. Le Seuer, is his bookkeeper, and is probably better acquainted with Mr. Le Seuer's business methods than any person in the city.

He heard the story and as soon as possible he boarded a train for Toledo.

In the meantime Mrs. Le Seuer had been informed of the suspicions concerning her husband, and naturally she was well nigh frantic with grief.

Mr. Harris found Mr. Le Seuer at the Oliver house soon after his arrival and found the Defiance man feeling badly, as he had read the account in the paper, which affected him to such an extent that he was ill.

Mr. Harris was dispatched home on the first train to explain the situation to Mrs. Le Seuer.

On going from here Monday Mr. Le Seuer found when he arrived in Toledo that a large quantity of timber laying at Wisterman, on the Clover Leaf railroad, had not been shipped to Toledo, and as a boat was being loaded and operations were being retarded by the non-arrival of the lumber. Mr. Le Seuer went to Wisterman to look the matter up. Arriving there he found the timber had not been properly loaded into the cars and the railroad company had refused to accept it for shipment. This probably explains his absence from Toledo.

The strange feature of the affair is what gave rise to the suspicion that he had disappeared or had been foully dealt with.

This cannot be explained, as he does a great deal of traveling and is away from home the greater portion of his time. Of all men in this city Mr. Le Seuer is perhaps the best able to take care of himself under any and all circumstances.

He is a careful and shrewd business man and knows Toledo as well as he knows Defiance. That portion of the Commercial's article concerning the amount of money he had with him is in keeping with the balance of the article, as those who know him best say he is not in the habit of carrying large sums of money on his person.

Mr. Le Seuer has a large number of friends in this city and elsewhere and while many took no stock in the story, all were greatly relieved to ascertain there was no truth in the rumor.

This morning's Commercial contains another installment of the wild and wooly stuff they had yesterday regarding Mr. Le Seuer. If the Commercial would stop faking up desk articles and send a reporter to the Oliver house it would find the gentleman and avoid making an ass of itself any further.

A MAN HAD JUMPED INTO THE RIVER. His last words were: "Life is not worth living; I have no money and no clothes." A philosophic bystander siezed a grappling hook and fished him out, telling him as he did so, to cheer up; that he had himself been in the same slough of despondency until the Hyman Co. had opened up, since which time he and his wife had bought their wearing apparel of them on easy payments and been happy. "And what's more," he continued, "there hain't been no suicides in this town since the Hyman Co. started, and I ain't goin' to stand by and see the record broken if I kin help it."

I CAN'T SLEEP!

There Are Thousands Who Cannot Sleep Well.

But There Is No Necessity of Suffering From This Trouble.

Insomnia Can Be Very Easily and Readily Cured—How to Do It.

Thousands of people do not sleep well. What wonder that there are so many shattered nerves, tired brains and debilitated bodies, when we consider the thousands who pass sleepless or disturbed nights, and rise mornings feeling indescribably miserable, dragged out, with tired limbs, exhausted energies, nerveless and ambitionless.

Read what our correspondents say in regard to this matter and follow their advice and example:

Mrs. Martha Jordan.

I was in bad shape when I began to take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I could not sleep nights, many times had to get up and walk the floor; had no appetite and what little I did eat soured in a few moments. I was nervous, weak and trembling, and got up in the morning more tired than when I went to bed, and felt all down—in fact, could not see anything worth living for. After taking one bottle of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, I could sleep all night and feel rested in the morning, my appetite was better, food did not sour, and I felt better all over. Now I have taken four bottles and I feel like a new being.

MRS. MARTHA JORDAN,
New Vineyard, Me.

Mrs. M. Walsh.

For three years I have suffered intensely with general debility, sleeplessness and nervous prostration. So worn out was I that I would have frequent fainting spells, alarming myself and friends. I found immediate relief on taking the first dose of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and was recovering before one-half bottle was used. The use of five bottles effected a complete cure. I can heartily recommend it to those afflicted in like manner.

MRS. M. WALSH,
8 Second st., Providence, R. I.

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is nature's own sleep producer and is perfectly harmless, being made from pure vegetable medicines. It soothes, calms and quiets the weakened, irritable and over-wrought nerves, producing perfect repose and refreshing, natural sleep; at the same time it builds up the shattered nerves and gives renewed life, strength and vigor to the system. Use it, you who are sleepless. Druggists keep it for $1.

It is the discovery and prescription of the eminent specialist in nervous diseases—Dr. Greene, of 35 W. 14th street, New York, who can be consulted free in regard to any case, personally or by letter.

Rats Did It.

Shortly before noon to-day fire was discovered in the bar room of the Hotel Hamilton. The department was called out and it was extinguished before serious damage was done. On investigation it was found to have originated between the walls and was started by rats biting the ends off matches they had somehow stolen and taken to their nests.

TERRIBLE ITCHING

Used Everything Five Months—In Three Weeks not a Scar or Pimple—Cured by Cuticura.

When my baby was three months old his cheeks and forehead began to break out with white pimples on red surface. In a few days itching commenced, which was terrible. After he would rub it, matter would ooze from the points. In a short time it spread over the top of his head, then scabs soon formed on head and face. We used everything we could hear of for nearly five months. It grew worse all the time. I saw your advertisement of the CUTICURA REMEDIES in the "Chicago Weekly." We purchased CUTICURA REMEDIES and commenced their use. In three weeks' time there was not a sore or pimple, not even a scar, on head or face. He is nineteen months old now, and has no signs of the disease. His scalp is healthy and he has a beautiful head of hair. (See portrait herewith.)

MRS. OSCAR JAMES, Woodston, Kan.

My infant, eighteen months old, was afflicted with skin eruptions on his hips. Bad sores came on other parts. All remedies failed until I procured CUTICURA. Cured a year and no return of disease.

Met and Prepared a Program.

The musical committee of the Schubert club met with Mr. Elvin Singer, chairman, Thursday, and prepared a program for the next meeting, to be held December 5. Those present were Miss Nellie Cook, Miss Anna Bernn, L. Mathias and Mr. Kortheuer.

A Schubert Evening.

A rare treat is in store for those who have been fortunate enough to receive invitations to the Schubert concert to be given Monday evening at Whitney & Currier's music hall by Elvin Singer and his pupils, assisted by Miss Nellie Cook and Miss Anna Bernn.

At the Y. M. C. A.

Sunday afternoon next two meetings will be held in Y. M. C. A. hall.

At 3 o'clock Rev. Wm. H. Sloan, of the First Baptist church, will talk to boys.

At 4 o'clock the young men's gospel song service will be addressed by Rev. T. W. Brake, of this city.

Young men will be cordially welcomed at this meeting.

Furnishing Things Up.

E. P. Leland has presented the Cadets with a handsomely framed military etching. The walls at the new quarters will take considerable furnishing and the boys will not be too proud to receive any little remembrances from their friends. It is intended to purchase a grand piano for the company parlors after the presentation of the Cartridge Box and it is possible that a billiard table will be put in.

An Appropriate Name.

H. G. Roller rolled into the police court this morning, and when one of the witnesses in the Wolf sausage case was having an altercation with the defendant, laughed aloud, and shouted, "You're a bad man." He was rolled out, and half an hour later rolled back in the patrol wagon, having been arrested at the corner of Adams and Superior streets for creating a disturbance.

A Preacher in a Box.

For some days rumors have been current that a Methodist preacher, residing in East Toledo, has been indulging in pranks not in consonance with his profession, to say nothing of good morals. The facts coming to the ears of several of the local pastors, the matter received an investigation, and sufficient grounds have been discovered to warrant the trial of the offending parson, and a committee is now drawing up the charges.

The Y. M. C. A Star Course.

The second attraction of the Y. M. C. A. star course is to appear at Wheeler's Tuesday evening next. It is to be a concert given by the Mendelssohn Quintette Concert club, an organization too well known to the public to need extensive advertising. This company has appeared for 43 seasons before American audiences and always furnished the finest of musical selections. The club is to give an excellent program in their entertainment.

Claims on the City.

Replies were filed in the United States court to-day by the Chester Pipe and Tube company, Jarecki Manufacturing company, and American Tube and Iron company to the answer of the city in the suits of these concerns against it. They admit the act of 1889, but declare that the supplementary act of April 7, 1892, made their claims binding upon the city, though it exceeded its legal power in contracting for the material for which claim is made.

Rosewell Messenger Appointed.

H. J. Middaugh has resigned as quartermaster sergeant of the Cadets on account of press of other business. For three years he had filled the position with credit to himself and the company. Roswell Messenger was appointed his successor last evening. Mr. Messenger acted as quartermaster sergeant at the last camp and made a record that would be hard to beat. To those who don't know, it might be well to state that the quartermaster sergeant has to purchase all the eatables while in camp and it is no snap.

All on Account of an Explosion.

The case of the trustees of the Auburndale M. E. church against the Northwestern Gas company, was taken up for hearing before Judge Pugsley in common pleas court. It is an action to recover $5,000 damages growing out of a natural gas explosion that occurred at the church building January 16, 1891.

This morning Judge Doyle, of the counsel for defense, argued a motion to take the case from the jury. Attorneys for the defense are Chas. A. Thatcher and Chas. Pratt.

Four Suits Against the Lake Shore.

In common pleas court to-day four damage suits were filed against the Lake Shore Railway company by Hamilton & Ford, attorneys.

John B. Ried demands $25,000. He was in the employ of the company as switchman and was injured at Air Line Junction.

Chester H. Hill was injured in the tunnel wreck. He asks for $10,000 damages.

Margaret Woelfle includes the city in her petition. She fell through a hole in the Field avenue bridge over the Lake Shore tracks. She demands $2,000.

Isaac Stoner was injured at a grain elevator while loading cars. He claims $30,000 damages.

Salvation Army Notes.

The Colored Songstresses of Canada will be at the hall on Oak street, near Ontario, to-night and all day Sunday, at 7 and 11 a. m. and 3 and 8 p. m. There will be an abundance of music and singing.

Capt. and Lieut. Jones have traveled for over eight years with great success in the Salvation Army.

"Hallelujah Wedding" will be the next important event in the S. A. here, and will take place in the Memorial hall on Thursday, December 1. Major Cozad, of Detroit, will tie the knot.

Friday, December 2, there will be a "Holiness Convention" in the hall, 724 Oak street.

Asphalt Pavements.

The asphalt paving of Putnam street, from Adams to Machen street, has been finished, as has the grading of Chicago street between Michigan and Summit. The concreting in the alley between Summit and St. Clair from Monroe to Jefferson is about finished, and the asphalt will be laid by Tuesday, if the weather remains favorable. The asphalt paving on Summit street is being repaired.

The Y. M. C. A. Association Course.

The association course of entertainments to be given under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian association bids fair to be a very fine course according to the talent which is to appear therein. This course is designed more particularly to attract new members to the association, as it is one of the many privileges offered to members of the association, and to which they are entitled free admission, by showing their membership ticket at the door of the opera house on the night of each entertainment. The public are given the opportunity of attending these entertainments, however, and no doubt the result will be of benefit to the association financially. The attractions of the course are: The Schubert Male Quartette of Chicago, who open the course Wednesday evening, December 7; Dr. L. B. Sperry appears December 14, with an illustrated lecture on "Alaska"; the Remenyi Grand Concert company's concert will be given January 31. The Detroit Philharmonic club, assisted by the Mehan Lady quartette, of Detroit, will close the course, March 15.

Half fare excursion rates made by T., A. A. & N. M. Ry. on Sunday trains.

OHIO MILLERS

Make Application for Certain Changes Without Avail.

A matter that will interest Toledo millers and grain men has been taken by the Central Traffic association. It seems correspondence from the Ohio, Michigan and Indiana Millers' association was presented at the recent meeting of the association, requesting that a special class be established to include grain and its manufactured products. A letter was also read from Chairman Gill stating that the classification subject in the light of the arguments advanced but they did not see their way clear to recommend the adoption of the proposition, consequently the subject was laid on the table.

THE CITY OF TOLEDO.

A Private Party Wants to Take Her to the World's Fair.

A number of well-known Toledo gentlemen are talking up the idea of taking in the world's fair at Chicago next summer in a novel manner. They are discussing the feasibility of chartering the steamer City of Toledo for the trip. If the desired number can be secured the boat will be turned into a floating hotel that will convey its guests to Chicago and cast anchor right along side the pier at the exposition grounds.

It is desired to secure some twenty families, allowing about six to a family. It would make a jolly party and would be a most enjoyable way, and perhaps economical one to see the big show.

Do not ruin the stomach with chemicals. Simmons Liver Regulator is purely vegetable and effective.

A BOY CRIMINAL.

Harry Dweyer Sent to Lancaster for Nine Years.

Henry Dweyer, the lad caught by Mrs. Joanna Rausch stealing money from her till, was tried by Judge Sala this morning. Mrs. Rausch told of this boy and a colored lad coming into her store Wednesday evening. The colored boy asked for a pint of milk, and as she was going to get it she turned back and saw Dweyer lying across the counter with his hands in the money drawer. She took $1.75 in silver out of his hand and kept him till an officer came. Officer Kruse, who made the arrest, testified that the boy has a mother; had been to the reform school before for stealing; has been away from his home and laying around Kelley's saloon for two weeks. The boy said his mother lived on Wabash street, and that he was 12 years old. The judge admonished him to try and make a man of himself, and sentenced him to the industrial school at Lancaster till he is 21 years old.

IMPURE SAUSAGE.

An Adulterated Article Given to City Prisoners.

Henry Wolf was tried before Judge Sala this morning on a charge of having impure sausage in the city for sale. The witnesses examined were Meat Inspector Walter Brown, Manager Turner of the Moreton Truck company, Officer Graham, a Mr. Jacobi, a saloonist named Spetz, Louis Volk, City Analyst Kirchmaier and the defendant. It was shown that the sausage was received from Lima, Waynesfield and Ft. Wayne, and was colored with a red dye; that it smelled bad; that some of it was offered and sold, this being admitted by Wolf, who claimed it was only slimy from damp and had been unpacked, washed, dried and repacked. Wolf produced some of the sausage given to the prisoners and declared it was adulterated, and Meat Inspector Brown said it had potato flour in it. This did did not save Wolf from a fine of $50 and costs, against which he promptly appealed.

CHRISTMAS SALE

And Supper To Be Given in the First Baptist Church.

The Ladies' Sewing society of the First Baptist church will give a fancy bazaar and supper in the church parlors Wednesday afternoon and evening, November 30.

The sale will commence in the afternoon, and supper will be served from 6 to 8 in the evening.

The chairmen of committees are: Fancy booth, Mrs. Hartman; ice cream and candy, Miss Chapman; supper, Mrs. Turner and Mrs. Meyers.

A great variety of articles of every description will be for sale.

MRS. BARNES

Will Resume Her Duties as Matron of the Boys' Home.

The regular monthly meeting of the trustees of the Toledo Boys' Home was held yesterday.

Much to the satisfaction of all concerned, Mrs. Barnes will return Monday and take up her duties as matron.

While the home is in good condition, Mrs. Barnes has been greatly missed, and will be cordially welcomed.

The work of preparing for a cold winter needs a strong and willing arm, and great executive ability.

It is hoped to be able to give the boys a very merry Christmas.

THE METEORIC SHOWER.

Prof. Porter Regards the Display as the Lost Comet of Biela.

Prof. J. G. Porter, of Cincinnati, writes to the Times-star as follows:

The lost comet of Biela revealed itself again last night in the form of a beautiful shower of shooting stars. During the time they were watched here the meteors were falling at the rate of four per minute, and since not more than half the sky could be watched at once, it is safe to say they were really coming much thicker. That these shooting stars were the remnants of Biela's comet there can be no doubt from the fact of their radiant point being in the constellation Andromeda. Even a casual observer would notice that no matter in what part of the sky they appeared their paths traced backward intersected at a common point. Most of the meteors were quite small, but occasionally a brilliant one would sweep across the sky, leaving a trail for several seconds. The Holmes comet has also been observed here, but is growing much fainter, and is evidently receding from the earth. It is scarcely within the range of possibility that it has any connection with Biela's comet.

The initial number of the Street Car Employes' Gazette is out, is very neat and contains well chosen matter, including communications from different lodges, among others, Toledo.

Bids for a number of street improvements will be received on Monday next at noon.

How much taxes do Chicago clothing merchants pay to support Ohio public institutions?

Bryan's murder trial is developing some strange situations. The jury has a rather peculiar job on hand.

"There is a good deal of head work in football," says the Lowell Courier, and, it may be added a good deal of head-break.

Toledo will have a "hallelujah wedding" next week under Salvation Army auspices. It is to be hoped that the hallelujahs will not end with the tying of the knot.

We are now having comets galore. Astronomers say there are no less than seven perambulating through the universe. These are sufficient to satisfy the most exacting.

Perhaps Steward Cahill might enlighten the merchants of Toledo on the matter of the asylum Chicago clothing purchases. Surely some one ought to give a reason for the remarkable proceeding.

The total vote of Ohio was 850,126, of which Harrison received 405,187; Cleveland, 404,114; Weaver, 14,818; Bidwell, 26,007. This shows a republican loss in the state of at least 20,000, and a capture of one democratic elector.

The meeting of the committee of twenty last evening, at which municipal reform was discussed, was probably a fair sample of the condition of public feeling in the matter. All are ready to complain, but those who can suggest a practical remedy for evil are very few. Perhaps out of all the commotion some good may be accomplished. At least such is the general hope.

To-morrow night we are to have, according to astronomical calculations, a grand spectacular celestial display of meteors, caused by a brush of the comet's tail. Yet for the information of the timid we can assure them that on Monday old Mother Earth will continue to do business at the old stand. If, however, the show fail to materialize, don't give way to disappointment, for it has been discovered that astronomers are only human, and are as prone to disagree as doctors.

Mr. Cleveland has given a vigorous setback to enthusiastic office-seekers who are pushing their claims, real or imaginary, by emphatically announcing that he will have nothing to do with appointments to office until he becomes president. And he is right. He does not propose to be coerced by the unseemly haste of those who attempt to force themselves upon him in this regard. It will be better for them to remember that they only injure their chances of securing a position by undue precipitation in this matter.

Those great-brained editors who accomplished such wonders in predicting the result of the presidential election, and made such a woful failure in every prediction, are now turning the mighty forces of their intellect in portraying the dire calamities that will befall the American people under genuine tariff reform, and the aegis of democratic rule. The people, however, take their predictions at their true value, and continue serene and unruffled in the choice they have made.

Some of our cotemporaries should keep themselves better posted in the political history of their own country and Ohio journals of their own state. Surprise must be expressed that so well informed a journal as the Boston Herald should fall into the error of some of the Ohio press, notably the Zanesville Times and Recorder, and others that could be named, by making the statement that Ohio will cast a democratic electoral vote for the first time in its history. The Buckeye state chose democratic electors in 1852, and prior to that date several times gave its electoral vote to democratic candidates. At heart Ohio is a democratic state, and the Bee is very much mistaken if in the future it will not be found on the democratic side of the house.

The false information given by Ivan Petroff in relation to the seal industry of Alaska for the Bering sea case of arbitration, and which was forwarded to England as a part of our pleadings, does not inspire one with great faith in the Alaska statistics furnished by him for the eleventh census. It is strongly suspected that his figures in this are also false. Indeed there are some matters that have leaked out pointing to unreliability in many things in the census. One instance is given in a San Francisco journal in which a gentleman in California, appointed to collect certain statistics, made a boast of having furnished them, whereby he earned $500, without stirring out of his room. All that he had done in gathering and compiling the statistics desired was to add a certain percentage to figures that had been already furnished on the preceding New Year's Day by one of the San Francisco morning papers. Such guess work may have been resorted to in other instances. These incidents are certainly not calculated to inspire one with an over-weening confidence in the work of the census bureau.

There will be no extra session of congress unless some unforeseen contingency should arise between now and the 4th of March. The best minds of the democratic party appear to be opposed to it, and it is not likely that Mr. Cleveland will approve the plan of calling an extra session simply for the purpose of remodeling our tariff laws. He will take into consideration the business interests of the country, and the change in the tariff system will be brought about in a manner that will result in the least disturbance to our commercial and manufacturing interests. Tariff reform when accomplished must be effectual, and it can not be done in haste. There are too any interests, too many diversified industries to take into consideration. When a tariff act is completed it must be no patched-up affair. It must be complete in every detail—one that will distribute its burdens alike upon all. The day for protecting one class of interests at the expense of another is at an end, and the people can rest assured that the change will be made on the lines of the Chicago platform.

NOT ALTOGETHER ROSY.

There have been many misleading statements respecting the wonderful increase of exports and the diminution of our imports. A full statement of foreign commerce during the month of October shows the total exports have been reduced by more than $15,000,000 from the same month last year, while the aggregate of imports was increased more than $12,000,000. The value of exports only exceeds those of imports by $8,395,834, whereas the excess in the corresponding month last year was $36,040,984. Aside from cotton and breadstuffs the increase of exports made a better showing. Provisions, petroleum and live stock were all greater than last year.

In this connection the New York Commercial Bulletin calls attention to the remarkable movement of specie during the month of October. "A year ago," says the Bulletin, "the net imports of gold were more that $16,000,000. This year, after constant and large exports of gold for eight months amounting to more than $37,000,000, there appear in the month of October net imports amounting to only $2,634, 080." The Bulletin attributes a portion of the difficulty to the peculiar state of the silver market and holds that these "abnormal conditions are to be expected so long as we adhere to unwise currency legislation."

WERE IN COUNSEL.

Mayor Emmick's Committee of Twenty

Consider the Question of Municipa Reform—Citizens Invited to Give Their Views.

Municipal government reform was the subject of another animated discussion at the mayor's office last evening. There was a large attendance of the committee, and numerous plans and suggestions were offered. All who desired had ample opportunity to present his views, and in this way municipal government received a most thorough overhauling.

The following members of the committee of 20 appointed by the mayor at the last meeting were in attendance: Messrs. J. Kent Hamilton, Henry Spielbusch, Dr. W. C. Chapman, George P. Kirby, Jacob Romeis, J. W. Caldwell, R. G. W. Foster, S. S. Knabenshue, H. P. Platt, W. H. Hartford, O. A. Browning, S. F. Forbes, Charles Eaton, Theo. Schmidt, William Beatty and Judge R. C. Lemman.

The committee, it will be remembered, was made non-partisan, consisting of ten democrats and ten republicans.

Representatives of the people's and prohibition parties were present and requested that their organizations be not ignored. The following gentlemen were then made members of the committee: R. J. Huffman, A. G. Otto and George Hueston.

Hon. Jacob Romeis was then elected chairman of the committee and William Beatty secretary.

A resolution was introduced requesting all citizens who wished to appear before the committee at any time or had views to submit the same in writing to the secretary of the committee.

Dr. S. F. Forbes presented this resolution, which was adopted:

"Resolved, That each member of the committee be afforded opportunity to express his views upon the question of our city government, either orally or in writing, at this or at any subsequent meeting, and thereafter a sub-committee of — members be appointed to take the whole matter into consideration and report, in writing, to the general committee at as early a date as convenient, such action as in their judgment should be recommended by this committee."

The members of the committee each in turn gave his plan of how the city government should be managed. These opinions covered a vast field of reason and were diversified in conclusion and effect.

One declared himself against an arbitrary board of control, and suggested a board of improvement to act in unity with one of the present boards of council.

Others demanded a radical change and a clean sweep of the official platter. Others wanted the city government run by the people and thought the present system good enough.

Thus the discussion went on, until a dozen or more had submitted as many plans.

An adjournment was taken until next Friday evening, when it is expected that some definite steps may be taken.

THE CADETS MOVED

Into New Quarters With a Parade and Supper.

A Pleasant Time at the New Armory—The Officers Get Up a Spread as a Surprise.

The local military, with the exception of Battery D, is now comfortably located in the new armory. The cadets took formal possession of their quarters last evening. They bid their old home farewell forever at about 9 o'clock and made a short march, taking in Summit street. Red fire was burned at every corner, and the boys showed up in great style with every able bodied man in line. The pedestrians were somewhat surprised at the demonstrations. They didn't just know that the Cadets were moving.

As the company neared the armory a continuous volley was fired; the whole building was brilliantly illuminated; they marched in on the big drill floor that is nearly three times as large as the one at Memorial hall and there met Company A, under Capt. Weber. Three cheers and a tiger were given for Company A, and the compliment was returned, when both companies joined in a cheer for the new armory, that settled the rafters.

The company was drawn up and Sergeant Irving read orders as follows:

To-night we have entered our military home. Let us so conduct ourselves and attend to our duties in such a manner as to show our full appreciation of the people of the country. We ask you to bear in mind the splendid work just turned over to your care and use. With such a home and with untiring action on our parts we wish to take a position among the companies of the state that will be a credit to us. I pledge you on my part my efforts shall be given to uphold that which you all know has been one of my life works. Let us all go forth to-night with a feeling of stronger brotherhood and a resolve to fill our ranks to the limit.

CAPT. W. V. M'MACKEN.

The boys supposed that this concluded the ceremonies, but not so. The captain gave the order and the company proceeded up stairs, where a spread was awaiting them, a little surprise by the officers. Caterer Hammer had outdone himself to make it palatable and he succeeded. An impromptu musical program was rendered and a most enjoyable evening was passed. It was a late hour when Capt. McMacken moved that, as they were all moved, they had better get a move on themselves and move home. So they moved.

NOT GUILTY.

Cases Against Union Men To Be Dropped.

West Superior, Wis., Nov. 26.—The first of the two cases against the eight members of the Amalgamated association for assault on non-union men came to an end yesterday with a verdict of not guilty.

The prosecution made a weak case and the defense in consequence was not along the line expected. The only evidence offered by the defense was to prove an alibi.

It is doubtful if the second case will be prosecuted, as the evidence in brief is the same. The strike at the steel plant is still on and the trial has caused considerable feeling between union and non-union men.

Florette Tells of Evening Dresses

That Must Be Worn Without Corsets—A Carriage Costume.

Special Correspondence Bee.

New York, Nov. 26.—Let me introduce to you a truly modish lady, costumed for formal calls. The long mantle is a feature of the toilet. She uses a carriage for her round of calls, and so may wear a more "dressy" outer garment than she could display on a promenade.

A curious thing about this particular dress was that it had no corset under it. The woman was so thin and willowy that she could discard stays with disdain. Not so with most of us. There are several styles of evening dresses, new for this winter, that must be fitted to the natural lines of the figure, and worn without corsets. Otherwise the gown is a mere freak, and, likewise, so are you. On the dummy figures they look lovely. They are princess cut gowns. They fit close to the figure and a sash is wound about the figure, its lower edge marking the waist line, the upper edge seeming almost a support for the bust. The sash closes by a rosette at the side, and long streamers hang down the skirt. The sleeves are very long, cut over the back of the hands in Venetian style. The bodice above the sash is loose, but the neck is high and close. The dress is lovely on the lay figure. But one is bound to observe that the lady is made with very narrow hips and narrow shoulders with full shoulder line notwithstanding. You see the advantage these lay figures and ordinary fashion plates have is that they are made by carpenters and draughtsmen, and to suit the dress that is to go on them. As for us, Nature made us, and just for what particular dress is what we have since years of discretion been trying to find out. FLORETTE.

JOHN A. COCKERILL.

His Rampant Republicanism Ridiculous Beyond Expression.

Pages of Nonsense Dished Out Diurnally — Disappointment and Revenge Addle His Intellect.

Of all the political turncoats and ridiculously awkward acrobats that ever confronted the public with their surprising and peculiar antics, Col. Jno. A. Cockerill is perhaps the most conspicuous.

Some years ago this then consistent and reputable journalist was editor of the Cincinnati Enquirer, or at least to the outer world he was associated with the editorial management of that widely-circulating journal and conducted its editorial columns on the lines of democracy and good government to a degree that was most satisfactory to the supporters of that faith in the Buckeye state and elsewhere in the west, north and south.

For some reason, of no interest to the public, Mr. Cockerill's connection with the Enquirer was severed and he drifted to New York, where he was for some time editor, or at least posed as such, of the World, of that city. From this honorable and influential post he also resigned, whether by reason of threatened ejectment or from preference is not fully known. Suffice it to say that both the Enquirer and the World have actually been able to conduct their editorial columns without the contributions of this extraordinary man, though no doubt very much to the surprise of the latter, who, it appears, had become afflicted with an aggravated case of megalocephalus or hydrocephalus, which, with paroxysmal fury, has intermittently disarranged his cerebral faculties. How such nonsensical platitudes as are daily printed in his penny-a-line sheet, the Daily Advertiser, could possibly emanate from the pen of a once wise and forcible democratic editor is thoroughly inexplicable, save on the theory that anger and pique resulting from being relieved from two great journals, has caused tholphosphorescent substance, sometimes called brains, of which he at one time appeared to possess a reasonable sufficiency, to become softened or converted into a kind of gelatinous mass of undeveloped nerve ganglion which remains in his cranial cavities solely for the reason that nature abhors a vacuum.

Why, however, a consistent democratic editor should become a ranting republican lunatic because two democratic journals concluded to dispense with his services is even more enigmatical than the former proposition.

It is usually supposed that impaired mental functions result from disintegration of the brain tissue caused by the ravages of disease or the effects of heredity. Here, however, appears the strange and anomalous condition of a disordered intellect caused by chagrin. Evidently from the manner in which Col. Cockerill alludes to the World, his greatest delight would be to see that journal suppressed. Instead of approaching that condition, since the Colonel was bounced so incontinently from its editorial staff, it appears to have become more forcible and popular than ever, never paying any attention to the wails of the Colonel and treating his rabid personal insinuations and ridiculous republican editorials as so much chaff to be blown upon the wind.

Henry Clay once said that when parties change their principles wise men change their parties. Read inversely it is fair to conclude that when parties retain their principles only fools change their parties. The Colonel, however, may justify his position by saying that though he did believe in democracy while connected with the Enquirer and World, yet when discharged from both he began to see the folly of his association with the party to which they belonged. Nothing could be more ridiculous than the Colonel's articles published in the Herald before the election, and his current effusions in the penny-a-line Advertiser demonstrate most conclusively that his position is prompted by pique rather than from principle. We thought the Colonel above such littleness.

WANTED SOME CASH.

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 26.—Telegrams were received by business firms in this city yesterday stating that Cashier B. J. Martin, of the Webster bank at Eupora, Miss., went into the vaults on Thanksgiving day and helped himself to money and securities ranging from $15,000 to $20,000 and skipped. He is supposed to be hiding in Memphis.

LIMA GAS.

The Situation Explained to the City Council.

Lima, O., Nov. 26.—(Special)—The Lima Natural Gas company, in response to a demand of councils, gave out the following last night:

"The situation is that we have 46 wells on the line. Every valve and stop cock from the bottom of the wells to the consumer's mixer is wide open and every atom of gas that can come is coming. We are working 40 men night and day in an effort to get the pumps placed. It will take 20 days to finish this work. We are providing boilers 16 feet long, 6 feet in diameter with 88 4-inch flues. Two steam engines with 20x30-inch cylinders, and two compressors with 24x30-inch cylinders. We expect to bring gas to the city limits at 20 pounds pressure and supply 6,000,000 cubic feet daily to consumers. Should the pumps, which are being built, and which are the same kind of pumps used in the sub-marine operations at Port Huron and Heligate, the Calumet and Hecha mines in northern Michigan and the famous consolidated Virginia and Anaconda mines in Montana, prove successful, we will give consumers a perfect service."

RETAIL DRY GOODS

Merchants Doing a Splendid Business.

The Season Has Been an Active One and the Future Is Very Bright.

A visit to the dry goods stores of the city shows that the merchants are doing a rushing business.

Every store is crowded and interviews with the proprietors give evidence that they are well pleased with the season's business.

Of all the merchants on Summit street, but two mentioned politics.

Both of these gentlemen are business men of long standing and equal success.

The one a protective tariff man predicted dire things should a free trade bill pass, while the other, a tariff reformer, was quite as emphatic in his assertion that the country is safe with Grover Cleveland at the helm.

They were all too busy, however, to say much.

Following is the substance of the brief interviews:

Connolly Bros—Business was never better with us than at present. We are well satisfied.

Neuhausel Bros.—Since getting in goods after the fire, the business has been fully up to that of last year. Despite the cramped condition of things, and the lack of facilities to fully display the goods in all departments, the month of October was even better than the corresponding month last year. In a few months we shall be back in our old quarters, which will then be new, and all the indications point to a marked increase in our business over last year.

Mr. Shaw, of Lasalle & Koch—Our business is fully up to what it has been. In fact, there is not even the smallest department in the store that does not show a decided increase over last year.

Mr. C. B. Lamson—Our business is just as good and a little better than a year ago.

Mr. Curtis, of the Lion store—We are particularly pleased with this season's business. The increase has been marked, and we believe we have a year of peace and prosperity before us.

R. L. McElroy—More business than we can attend to, as you see for yourself.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES.

The Colloquial Club Considered Various Topics

Yesterday—The Corporal Punishment Question Laid Over—Announcements.

The Colloquial club was entertained Friday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. R. L. Segur, 916 Broadway.

In the absence of Mrs. R. L. Segur, Mrs. Daniel Segur acted as hostess.

Mrs. Judge Howe presided, and the first subject considered was "What Were the Lessons Taught Us by Columbus Day?"

Many interesting points were brought out, among them that the day taught patriotism and that on the common ground of love for country, all creeds, colors, conditions and classes could meet.

Among the ladies taking part in the discussion were Mesdames Fray, Sumner, D. Segur, Dutton, Rogers, Grah, Elderkin, Murray, Quigley, Keist, and Misses Law, Wheeler, Godfrey, Heist, and Misses Law, Millan and Calkins.

The suggestion of Mrs. Segur that the corporal punishment question be laid over until she could be present, was acted upon, and the other subject, "Is It Right for a Married Woman in Good Circumstances to Earn Money?" was next taken up.

The discussion of this question was very animated and the opinions as varied as possible, some ladies believing that a married woman's place is at home, that her children suffer neglect and her husband loses his self-respect, when his wife takes his place in the business of supporting the family.

There were objections to the question by married ladies present, who resented the question as an impertinent interference with their personal affairs, while still others were of the opinion that no outsider was competent to judge of another person's life, how they were situated, or what their circumstances really were.

One lady remarked emphatically that she thought the subject a very gossipy one, and hoped that very little time would be given to its consideration.

No vote was taken, but it seemed to be the general opinion that to say what a woman should or should not do, would be to deprive her of that individuality for which she is striving.

The business before the club was the report of the committee appointed to look for a suitable meeting place.

Mrs. Keist reported that they had been unable to find any desirable place, and said they wished to be excused.

On motion they were excused from further work, and a vote of thanks tendered them for their efforts.

The project of the Woman's Building company to rent a building for a club house was discussed, and a motion carried that the Colloquial club will take a room provided suitable quarters are obtained, and Mrs. Murray and Mrs. Keist were appointed to so report at the meeting of the building committee this afternoon, and report the action of the committee at the next meeting of the club, which will be held at the home of Mrs. Keist, 219 Seventeenth street, Friday afternoon, December 9, at 3:30 o'clock.

The meeting then adjourned.

Notes.

The meeting of the Woman's Building committee is being held this afternoon in the Woman's Recorder office. It is likely some important action will be taken in the matter of renting a suitable club building.

The Political Equality club will meet next Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, at the residence of Mrs. Emma Harley, 1804 Adams street. The second paper on the Constitutional History of Ohio will be read by Miss Calkins, and a parliamentary drill will also be conducted. It is expected the meeting will be well worth attending.

The monthly meeting of the Union of Unions will be held Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock with Air Line union.

The Isabella circle will be entertained Tuesday afternoon, December 20, by Mrs. O. A. Browning. The paper will be read by Mrs. Sloan; subject, "The Loss of the Spanish Possessions in South America."

The Maumee Political Equality club held two excellent meetings Tuesday last. One in the afternoon in the parlors of Mrs. Van Rensalaer, and the other in G. A. R. hall in the evening. Mrs. E. L. Fray, district vice president of the Ohio Woman Suffrage association, addressed both meetings upon the reasons why women should have political enfranchisement and also presented the enrollment petition of Mrs. Louisa Southworth, of Cleveland, for signatures in favor of woman suffrage legislation, state and national. Mrs. Judge Bentley gave a well-received address, as did also Mrs. Josephine Scott, of Perrysburg, upon various phases of the woman question. Delightful music interspersed the addresses, which were most favorably received by a large audience of Maumee and Perrysburg people.

An effort is on foot in New York state to inaugurate legislative provisions for the admission of women delegates to the coming constitutional convention, and Susan B. Anthony is spoken of as a delegate.

Julia Ward Howe was re-elected vice president of the Society for the Advancement of Women, at its annual meeting at Memphis recently.

The New Century club meets with Mrs. E. Bissell next Wednesday evening, the 30th. Rev. Dr. Cravens will give the paper upon "The Single Tax." Mr. J. B. Battelle gives the paper on the 14th, and Prof. Friedberg on the 28th of December.

INJURED—INSANE.

"IN MEMORIAM."

Lord Tennyson's Masterpiece Carefully Considered

By Prof. Bensly Last Evening—Every Word Should Be Studied.

Perhaps a Toledo audience never listened to a finer address than Prof. Bensly's able exposition of Tennyson's masterpiece, "In Memoriam."

The only thing to be regretted is that the hall was not crowded.

Prof. Adams said, before the beginning of the lecture, that in Prof. Compton's absence he had been requested to call attention to the importance of paper and class work.

The strong feature of these lectures is that they enable people to read understandingly, to classify properly, etc., and in order to make the impression received at the lectures lasting their thoughts should be put on paper.

Prof. Bensly then said that in his first lecture he had spoken of Tennyson generally. He now took up one special poem—a typical poem, just as Tennyson was a typical poet.

Every word of the poem should be studied.

It is a work that embodies all those special characteristics for which Tennyson was noted, and to the full extent his wonderful command of style, wonderful poetic thought and mechanism.

The history of the origin of the poem is well known.

It was written on the death of his friend, Arthur Henry Hallam, a son of the well-known historian.

He was two years younger than Tennyson, but of the same standing in college, and was not only a friend in college life, but a visitor at Tennyson's home, and engaged to his younger sister.

Hallam died at Vienna in 1833, and though In Memoriam was not published until 1850, it seems to have been finished many years before.

In Memoriam differs from other elogies, such as Milton's, Lycidas, Shelley's, Adonais and the Thyrsis of Matthew Arnold.

Tennyson describes not only his grief at his friend's death, but the doubts and fears to which his feelings give rise.

At the close of the lecture, the class exercise was given to the consideration of Maud.

The third lecture will be on Robert Browning, and the exercise on In Memoriam.

The lectures should be much better attended.

Health has its weight. We cannot go far above or below our healthy weight without disturbing health. We cannot keep health and lose our weight.

It is fat that comes and goes. Too much is burdensome; too little is dangerous.

Health requires enough fat for daily use and a little more for reserve and comfort. That keeps us plump. The result is beauty—the beauty of health.

CRAZY TESTIMONY.

Fourth Day of the Bronson Will Case.

Bert Burget Admits Gobbling His Watermelons.

Cross-Examiner Ford Brings Out Humorous Points—Interest Growing in the Case.

The Bronson will case continues to attract a curious and interested audience in Judge Lemmon's court room, of common pleas court.

This morning Bert Burgert was on the stand, called by the plaintiff.

Mr. Burgert testified that he lived all his life next-door neighbor to Calvin Bronson; that when a boy he stood well in the favor of the old gentleman, and continued so up to manhood and time of his death. He stated that he always used to stop Mr. Broson on the street and pass a few social remarks; that during his later years of his life, when he would meet the deceased on the street and speak to him, as usual, he would receive no response; that Mr. Bronson did not seem to know him; would ask who he was, and declare that he never knew him. He judge from this that Calvin Bronson was of unsound mind.

"How old are you, Mr. Burgert," asked Mr. Ford on cross-examination.

"Twenty-eight years old."

"You say you have known Mr. Bronson ever since you were a little boy?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did he know you?"

"I should think so. He had reason to know me."

"Why?"

"Well, Mr. Bronson always had a fine garden, in which he always took a pardonable pride. In summer time there was a rumor in that neighborhood, that the Burgert boys knew considerable about certain fine watermelons and grapes that had mysteriously disappeared from the garden. Yes, I think he knew me."

"Did you ever pass any of your friends on the street and not speak to them?"

"I have no doubt."

"Are you crazy?"

"I should hope not.

"Well, now, do you mean to say that every person of your acquaintance that passes you on the street without speaking to you is crazy?"

"No, sir; but the circumstances I related are different."

Thus the cross-examination went.

The Testimony Yesterday Afternoon.

Bernard Meilink was called to the stand by the plaintiff. He knew Mr. Bronson for years. He was connected with Mr. Bronson in the Toledo Mower and Reaper company, of which Mr. Bronson was a director. He stated that he had trouble with Mr. Bronson; that the business did not prosper; this he ascertained as soon as he became president of the corporation.

He remembered that the company gave its note for about $175,000, indorsed by the directors. He also remembered a conversation with Mr. Bronson about the payment of this note. It occurred on the corner of Orange and Summit streets three or four years ago. Mr. Meilink said that Mr. Bronson on this occasion approached him on the subject. He informed Mr. Bronson that they would all be liable for the amount of the stock they held to which Mr. Bronson assented.

The next day the directors held a meeting, at which time the conversation held the day before came up, and Mr. Bronson did not remember anything about what he had said the day before, and declared that it was false.

Mr. Meilink stated that Mr. Bronson came to him and tried to get off the note, telling him that if he was compelled to pay the amount it would break him up; that he would have to go to the poor house; that he would not even have a crust of bread. Further, that he had just been compelled to pay $18,000 for Charles Messenger, his son-in-law. Mr. Meilink told him that he (Bronson) could pay the whole amount and then have plenty left; that Bronson would stop him on the street and say, "Here, d—n you, you have ruined me," but would not explain how or why; that on such occasions he would grind his teeth like a mad person.

Witness testified that from what he saw and learned of the deceased, until their business matters were settled, he believed that he was unsound in mind.

On cross-examination by Mr. Thurston, the witness stated that Mr. Bronson owned a majority of the stock; that they voted to assess the liability in proportion to the amount of stock each held.

that this plan was adopted to shift the greater amount of liability upon the shoulders of Mr. Bronson.

Hon. William H. Baker was next called to the stand. He testified that the affairs of the corporation were ultimately settled in court, each director paying a percentage of the liability based upon the amount of stock he held.

Mr. Baker testified that from what he knew of Mr. Bronson he believed that he was a man of extreme prejudice; that his passion towards any one against whom he had conceived a dislike was extraordinary.

An objection was raised to the answer, which was sustained and ruled out.

In response to a question to tell what his opinion was as to Mr. Bronson's state of mind, Mr. Baker stated that to transact ordinary business, when he was not excited, he believed that Mr. Bronson was of sound mind, but when questions arose involving the prejudice he entertained, he was not of sound mind.

"Do you know anything about the lawyers he employed?" inquired Mr. Everett.

"I do."

"How many did he employ?"

"I could not say."

"Whom do you know he employed?"

"Barton Smith, Clarence Brown, A. L. Smith, Bissell, E. W. Tolerton, J. T. Greer."

Mr. Smith then related that during the meetings of the board of directors of the Mowing Machine company Mr. Bronson seemed to be not satisfied that the proceedings were just regular, and requested that his attorney be elected director, so as to enable him to be present and look after his interest. This was agreed to, and the attorney was elected. Mr. Bronson, not long after, stated that his attorney and he failed to agree, and requested that another be elected. This was done, until quite a list had been gone through and elected directors, each succeeding the other as they were dismissed.

Mr. C. A. King, another member of the board of directors of Toledo Mower and Reaper company, was next called by the plaintiff.

Mr. King stated that the board of directors agreed to indorse the paper referred to, under the provision that if the stockholders' liability failed to pay out the debts, the directors bound themselves to pay the balance in proportion to the amount of stock each held.

Mr. King stated that after the company had gone into the hands of a receiver Mr. Bronson would meet him on the street and upbraid him and charge him with being one of the rascals who helped to break him up.

Mr. King testified that during the last three years he pronounced the deceased very erratic, if not of unsound mind.

MILITARY COMPANIES

Deprived of Their Half Rates on Equipment.

H. J. Booth, of This City, Had Nothing to Do With It.

Although It Was Given Out That He Was On the Committee That Recommended the Action—Facts in the Case.

It has heretofore been the custom with the railroads entering Toledo and those throughout the state for that matter, to make a half rate on the equipment of the Ohio state militia at the time of their annual encampments and on the occasion of various other trips. This has been appreciated by the companies, as it allowed them to do more and provide better for their comfort than the appropriations would otherwise allow.

It looks as if this privilege was going to be deprived the boys in the future for the following report of a committee on the matter was adopted by the Central Traffic association, which is made up of the lines in this territory:

"Your committee has considered the question of carrying the camp equipment of the Ohio state militia at half rates and respectfully recommends that the custom of carrying military equipment as freight for the Ohio militia at half rate be discontinued and in future full tariff rates in both directions will be charged."

action was composed of E. T. Affleck, A. B. Hough, H. J. Booth, G. W. Davis, J. T. Townsend and G. F. McKay.

A Bee called on Mr Booth, who is the general freight agent of the Wheeling & Lake Erie railroad, this morning, and questioned him regarding the matter.

Mr. Booth said it was true that such action was taken, but he stated that it was done at a meeting of which he had not been notified, that he was not consulted and knew nothing about it until it was done.

"The sympathies of the railroads—and I speak more directly for the Wheeling—are with the military companies. We desire to show them any courtesy possible, for we know not what day we will be obliged to call on them for the protection of our property. Often the appropriations made by the state have to be closely guarded and considerable pinching is done to make both ends meet. The half rate helps the companies out, and I, for one, hope for a reconsideration of the matter."

Mr. Booth then addressed a letter to Chairman Affleck, in which he stated that he learned his name had been used in connection with the matter of discontinuing the half-rates for the Ohio militia, and he wished it understood that he did not approve of the action and was decidedly opposed to it. He thought the committee had made a grave mistake and he wished it known that he did not in any way sanction the action.

It is hoped by the military of Toledo that the matter will be reconsidered, and that in short order. The military protects the railroads as much as it does anybody or anything else, and it is not believed that such a petty slap in the face would have passed had the members of the association known what they had been doing. It was rushed through next to the last piece of business in a two-days' session.

THAT PARK CASE.

Petition of the Ann Arbor Company Dismissed

By the Circuit Court, Without Prejudice to Its Right to Make a Similar Defense in Probate Court.

The circuit court to-day handed down an opinion in the case of the Toledo, Ann Arbor & North Michigan Railroad company against the park commissioners.

The case in its progress has attracted public attention to a considerable extent. The park commissioners, in establishing a public park in lower town, needed certain land in the vicinity of Summit and Galena streets to accomplish their purpose, which is owned by the railroad company.

An offer of purchase was made at the same price offered the Pennsylvania Railroad company. This was declined, and not being able to agree with the owners, the commissioners began condemnation proceedings in probate court to appropriate the property according to law.

This proceeding was about to be taken up when the railroad company went into common pleas court and obtained a preliminary injunction restraining the appropriation of the property.

This was appealed to the circuit court without hearing, where the case was submitted in full.

This morning the circuit court in an opinion rendered by Judge Haynes, dismissed the petition of the railroad company, without prejudice to the railroad company's right to make the defense claimed to the proceedings for appropriation in probate court.

The court stated expressly that it did not pass upon the question of facts made by the parties.

BAILEY'S BADNESS.

A Toledo Embezzler Caught in Buffalo.

Robs His Employers, Deserts His Wife and Child and Skips With Another Woman.

Detective Carew left this morning for Buffalo to bring back Almon Bailey, against whom a charge of embezzlement is made by Hood Bros., of 616 Adams street. Bailey is about 30 years old, and has a wife and one child, about 4 years old. He formerly worked for a company in Fostoria, and was injured. In an action for damages he first got a verdict for $20,000; then for $15,000, but the case is still in the courts. On recommendation of good people Hood Bros. engaged him as a salesman, and sent him to Fremont on November 8 with another man, who left him there with a full line of samples, not receiving his report for last week the firm sent a man to inquire why, and found that he had skipped out with a girl named Mary Haas, whose mother showed a certificate of their marriage, whether genuine or not is not known. A letter in the postoffice there addressed "Mrs. Almon Hall" was forwarded here to his wife, who found it was for the other woman. It was from a sister in Buffalo, congratulating Mary on her marriage and inviting the couple to visit her.

This put the seekers on the trail, and by use of the telegraph, Bailey was arrested yesterday in Buffalo. He had about $200 worth of Hood Bros.' goods. The firm on Wednesday received a letter dated the 21st, and posted on the Nickel Plate road next day, containing Bailey's report for the week before. It was written by the second Mrs. Bailey, and spoke of discouraging weather; also asked for a certain kind of goods to be sent. It cancelled an order of Miss Mary Haas. This girl is a German, about 22 years old, and it is understood she and Bailey were married on Thursday of last week; also that Bailey packed up a telescope trunk and paid his bills before leaving Fostoria, stating that he was coming to Toledo. The Buffalo letter was posted on the 22d.

Bailey lived with his wife and child at Air Line Junction. The deserted wife is highly spoken of, and can hardly credit the evidence against her husband. She works for Humane Agent France. It is understood that Bailey will come back without a requisition, and it is not yet known whether a charge of bigamy will be placed against him or not.

Mrs. Grace Henderson Has Been Teaching.

Relates Her Not Unusual Experience for Young Women.

After a Trip Abroad She Returned Home and Was Married.

Mrs. Grace Henderson, who now resides at 344 West Fifty-first street, New York, has written a brief chapter of her life which will interest every young woman who reads the Bee.

"When I graduated from school some five years ago," she says, "there was not one among my classmates who was in a better state of health than was I. After a trip abroad, I returned to my old home, married, and came to New York to live. Within a year my husband was dead, and I was compelled to earn my own living. Having some influence, and being naturally adapted for such an occupation, I secured a position as teacher in one of the public schools. The work is particularly trying to a person of sensitive disposition, and I felt that it was having its effect upon me. My nerves, usually very strong, had become so weakened that the least unusual occurrence would cause me the greatest annoyance.

Grace Henderson.

"My strength began to fail me. My appetite was poor. My physician told me that my only hope of regaining health was to rest. My means would not allow of my doing such a thing, hence I had to find some medicine that would tone up my system.

"I found such a remedy, and used it constantly for nearly five months. When I began to use it I weighed but 103 pounds, which was some 40 pounds less than when I began teaching. In four months I gained 30 pounds and felt perfectly well, as shown by my picture. I am truly a convert to the benefits to be gained from using that wonderful medicine, Paine's celery compound."

There are thousands of men and women who have been enabled to follow their pursuits by the timely use of this preparation. It builds up the nervous system and sustains it. Brain and muscle alike are restored to their proper condition. It is not to be confounded with the common preparations so extensively advertised. Being the scientific discovery of a man of science—Prof. Phelps of Dartmouth college—it has the support of the leading physicians, and the many cases cured by its use prove that its support is merited.

PAID THE BET.

How Johnny Litty Got a Ride in Sandusky.

When a tall, broad-shouldered, blue-eyed commercial traveler appeared at the desk of the Sloane on Tuesday morning Clerk Colton abandoned his usual sunny smile of welcome and his joyous bon hommie, as Doc Rutter expresses it, "paled in its ineffectual fire," and his heart took the elevator into his boots.

To the ordinary man there was nothing in the guest's appearance to cause this transformation. When he registered his name as John B. Litty, Toledo, O., the pen trembled in the clerk's hand like the last leaf on an oak bough. The reason for this strange phenomenon was that two weeks before election Clarke, who is as stanch republican as ever chased a rainbow, agreed with Mr. Litty, who travels for Berdan & Co., of Toledo, that in case Grover Cleveland by any mischance might squeeze his gigantic form through the white house door, he would wheel Mr. Litty from the Sloane to the foot of Columbus avenue and return. This was Litty's first appearance since election and Colton knew he was doomed. Seven o'clock was fixed for the event, and at that hour the lobby of the Sloane was filled with people. Ben Rude and Roland Kunz of the First Voters club were on hand with drums to cheer their comrade at his task. "Pap" Bricken grasped a torch like Liberty Enlightening the World, and followed by a crowd of cheering friends Clark started on his journey. Litty smoked and laughed; Colton puffed and pushed. Down the avenue they went almost at a trot. Then the turn was made and the ascending grade was begun. Colton's face was like a fresh boiled lobster, but he stood the penance like a Trojan. When the Sloane was reached he said his arms were about six inches longer than when he started.

Everybody said he had done nobly, however, and Mr. Litty did the honors at the house in royal style.—Sandusky Press, 23d.

Coming Attractions at the Theaters—Robin Hood, The Dago, Primrose & West's Minstrels and the Wonderland.

A Bee dropped in on Rhea, behind the scenes the other night, and had a pleasant chat. Rhea has a warm spot for newspaper men. perhaps she has a motive. No doubt she desires that their pencils wiggle in her favor. Be that as it may, she is a charming woman, idolized by all who know her and worshiped by the members of her company. They all address her as Madam and swarm about her between the acts like a lot of children.

"Did I do that bit right, Madam?" that dressing room scene?"

"Are my eyes made up too heavy?"

"What will I do with my hands in that dressing room schene?"

"See here, Madam, do I look all right?"

Such are a few samples of the queries put to her, to all of which and many more she laughingly answers.

"We are all a little confused to-night," said Madam, turning to the reporter. "You don't know, perhaps, that this is only the third presentation of Princess Andrea. We are all new in the parts and are making some bad blunders, I fear."

"Well, if you are," replied the Bee, "I am sure your art is completely covering them."

"Oh, thank you; that was kind. The audience don't always know the anxiety we people behind the scenes feel. By the way, how do like my support. All the members of the company are young; quite young. My leading man, Mr. Hart, is only 28 years old. He is clever, though, and an enthusiastic worker. I like young people. They are bright, fresh and full of life and earnestness, and that is what makes a performance go.

"Do you know, I am surprised," continued the lady, "that you have no better opera house here. I think the city is large enough to have a first-class house on the ground floor. I always tremble to think of a fire in these second story houses. Why is it some one don't erect a better theater?"

"I am sure I can't tell. Perhaps they think it won't pay."

"Oh, it will. I am sure it will. Why, do you know that lots and lots of people are afraid to venture in these old-fashioned theaters. Just look at that little town Lima. It has a theater that would grace the metropolis. I am sure it could be nothing but a success, for this is a good show town."

"Well, I must go," said the Bee as the curtain was being rung up for the third act."

"Oh, don't hurry I've got plenty time." But the Bee thought not, and made his way to the front of the house. He had scarcely taken his seat when Rhea walked on to the stage in another dress than the one she was attired in when talking to him. How she got out of the one and into the other in such a short time is something the Bee has not yet settled in his mind. She did it, though.

Monday Evening's Opera.

The opera Robin Hood captured Toledoans on its presentation here last season. The Bostonians put it on in a finished manner. If the company that sings it here Monday evening does as well, the critics will be satisfied. The company is under the management of Barnabee, McDonald and Carl, and as they are excellent judges, no doubt the company will be up to the required standard.

Minstrels Thursday.

Primrose & West's minstrels will be at Wheeler's Thursday evening.

Every season they have something new to offer their patrons, until it would seem that novelty itself was exhausted; but they have apparently discovered a bottomless sea of minstrelsy delights, from which they continue to draw forth new wonders for their patrons' delectations. They have called beautiful scenic effects to the aid of wit and music, and one of the most striking features of their performance is the charming picture disclosed at the beginning, when the curtain goes up on a perfect bower of beauty, showing the company in a Japanese garden scene, wreathed with lovely flowers, while in the background luxuriant foliage, forming as bright a picture of natural beauty as one rarely has the fortune to see on the stage. So varied is the entertainment and so good each variety that it would be hard to find in a civilized community a taste that the minstrels have not something to please, while the majority welcomes every thing that comes along. The specialties of Morris Cronin, Musical Dale, Billy Van, Johnston, Riano and Bentley, and the European novelty, Abachi and Masaud, will form the strongest minstrel organization in the existence of Primrose & West.

About the Dago.

The play announced for next week at the People's Theater is "The Dago," a four-act scenic comedy-drama from the pen of Richard F. Carroll, late comedian of the Duff Opera company. The company is a strong one, headed by R. M. and E. H. Carroll, the former assuming the title role, and his portrayal is said to be a gem of character acting. The latter interprets an Irish policeman, and will be recognized by many as playing a similar character here with Kidnapped last season, and in which he scored a big success. The plot of the play is based upon a familiar subject, the abduction of a little child, and deals in general with life in a great city. Elaborate scenery and mechanical effects play no small part in this presentation, while sparkling comedy, rich dialogue and artistic dancing in turn takes places with touching pathos and pretty sentiment. The supporting company is individually strong and capable, and an even-balanced performance can well be expected. The scenery will be a special feature of the production. Aside from the Carrolls the principal members of the company are Herschel Mayall, Minnie Bowen, John C. Leach, Blanche Howard, Pearl Andrews, Little Annie Robinson, Britton Stephens and Jas. P. Adams.

Notes.

Caroline Hamilton, the prima donna, is making a distinct hit this season. Miss Hamilton sprang into fame as the the prima donna of the Bostonians, making a debut on the stage as Maid Marian in "Robin Hood," the same role that she will be heard in in this city. She is acknowledged to be one of the best light opera artists in America.

Hallen Mastyn, the English comedian, who was such a success with Alice Huntington last year, has been especially engaged to play the part of the "Sheriff of Notingham. Mr. Mostyn is acknowledged to be the best comedian on the light opera stage and his interpretation of the role of the high sheriff, is said to be one of the best things he has ever done, and his rare comedy has created great attention wherever he has appeared. The company is said to be first-class throughout.

At the Wonderland.

The chief attraction in the lecture hall at the Wonderland for the current week will be Ella Ewing, the giant girl, of Missouri, who is underlined as the tallest girl on earth. She is 18 years old and is said to stand over 8 feet high. She is a recent discovery, the daughter of a well-to-do farmer in Southern Missouri ,who is very proud of his mammoth daughter, and offers $1,000 for her equal.

Another feature of the department will be Fiji Jim and Annie, the only living representatives of the man-eating race in America, who will be seen in conjunction with an interesting exhibition of their implements of war, introducing correct representations of their war dances.

Another stage will be occupied by La Belle Minnie, with her human brained dog, Lillie, a beautiful albino setter that does everything but talk.

Signor Bodretta, the American Sampson, will demonstrate his claim to the title, in his unique performance with mighty weights, and whose feats of strength are simply phenomenal.

And in response to a public demand the favorite Italian gypsy band will be retained and will discourse sweet music for this department. While in the theater, one of the strongest specialty olios of the season is set out. A glance at the advertisemnet will show the pretentious character of the entertainment.

The acknowledged kings of grotesques are the three Marvelles formerly of Doestader's minstrels, who have been booked and will appear at every performance.

Then comes Will Denny, an author and composer, who writes every song he sings, and who has held the boards in Boston theaters for fifty weeks, which has won for him an enviable reputation.

Drawee, the beau ideal of all jugglers, will manipulate articles never before dreamed of, and to cap the climax comes Mons. Natalie's pig circus, consisting of trained barnyard pigs in a performance as interesting as it is novel, and the last animal on earth one would suspect doing tricks on a stage.

Other artists of merit have been engaged and will be placed on the list to make up one of the strongest programs yet presented, and the announcement that the usual high standard will be maintained in the theater is equivalent to saying they will be first-class in every particular.

On Thursday afternoon every lady visitor will be given a scarf pin made by the wire artist. Another week of packed houses can be expected.

LABOR UNIONS.

To the Editor: The trades unions of today are composed of men organized to better themselves and their employers, if the latter could be made to understand the aims and operation of the combine. Each trade represents a wheel—alone it is useless, united with another a power. A union member is requested to be temperate, honest and capable, giving to his employer the benefit of his knowledge to the best of his ability, asking a fair recompense, a just remuneration for time involved in learning a trade. A good machinist must be a good mathematician to calculate the exact measurement of the various manufactured articles. A capable carpenter should understand the laws of gravitation. All tradesmen must be skilled in their several callings to be allowed a full membership and are graded accordingly. The object of the trades union is generally regarded as antagonistic to capital and are branded as enemies to the manufacturer, but not so.

The unions endeavor to advance the educational and social interest of its members and to create harmonious and pleasant relations between employer and employe. One who pays just wages for services rendered should have the best reward for money thus expended. Every man according to his ability, ratified by a union scale, will exact nothing exorbitant, but feel in conscience bound to do his level best for his employer or be taken to task by the officers of the union he represents.

As a class the employers strive to reduce expenses. "Cut the wages" is the first thought; employ cheap-grade workmen to compete with skilled labor. The owners have to accept a vast amount of spoiled work and lost time from a cheap man. What sum total is the employer benefited?

The refusing to talk, or arbitrate, with the workmen in matters of dispute creates a rebound that astonishes as did the late election.

The introduction of machinery has left more time to develop the workers' mind, and they are not content with a living pittance, when their brain work has evolved the motive for the industry. The grocery mechanic in sweat and smut is denied a hearing, when it is through his toil that thousands were added to the merchant's coffers.

Ever since labor began to assemble and discuss their situation and relation to capital, those in power have taken means to suppress or disable the meeting, little knowing or trying to know its aims or objects. Even to-day there is a horror in the minds of some at the word labor or trade union. Working people see the need of unity more and more, day by day, in trying to help the weary and weak-hearted and cheer the toiler on in the endeavor to create a wish and a will to give a just recompense for honest labor, an honest day's work with good honest money.

A GREAT GIFT TO THE PEOPLE.

There have been great advancements in medical science during the last few years. It no longer surprises us to hear that the blind see, the deaf hear, the lame walk. Heretofore sufferers from nervous and chronic diseases could have a cure of their cases accomplished only by a personal visit to one of the large cities at great expense of travel and professional fees. At the present day all this is changed. A celebrated specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases, known all over the United States on account of his enormous practice, great skill, and the thousands of sufferers he has restored to health by his system of harmless vegetable remedies, proposes to send to all sufferers from any form of nervous or long-standing diseases, a valuable written diagnosis of their cases, fully explaining their diseases and telling how they can be cured free of charge. Thousands are being cured. Don't delay, but write at once about your case to this great physician, Dr. Greene, 35 W. 14th street, New York, the discoverer of the great Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Send for his symptom blank to fill out.

DRUNKENNESS

Or the Liquor Habit Positively Cured by administering Dr. Haines' Golden Specific.

It can be given in a cup of coffee or tea, or in food, without the knowledge of the patient. It is absolutely harmless, and will effect a permanent and speedy cure, whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alcoholic wreck. It has been given in thousands of cases, and in every instance a perfect cure has followed. It never Fails. The system once impregnated with the Specific, it becomes an utter impossibility for the liquor appetite to exist.

SENTENCE PASSED.

The decision is final, and has been given by an overwhelming majority of the music loving people, that it pays to buy a good piano or organ, and that the well-known and deservedly popular Kranich & Bach piano is about as near perfect in construction, durability, tone and touch as can possibly be expected.

Col. Greene, with whom the writer had some little talk on pianos, says that it is a noticeable fact that more good instruments are going out of his salesrooms this fall and winter than ever before. Frequent sales of the celebrated Vose & Sons instrument have been made lately, while the Stultz & Bauer Piano Co., of New York city, are highly pleased with the number of pianos sold by Messrs. H. W. Greene & Co., who are located in the Pythian Castle, on Jefferson street.

THE MEDICAL PROFESSION

In Ohio Alive and Determined to Lead the World.

Extract From a Letter at the Surgical Hotel, Columbus, Ohio, on Chronic Catarrh, by Dr. S. B. Hartman.

Catarrh is the continual scourge of christendom. It hovers ominously over every city and pestles treacherously in every hamlet. It flies with vampire wings from country to country and casts a black shadow of despair over all lands. Its stealthy approach and its lingering stay makes it a dread to the physician and a pest to the patient. It changes the merry laugh of childhood to the wheezy breathing of croup, and the song of the blushing maiden to the hollow cough of consumption. In its withering grasp the rounded form of the fond wife and mother becomes gaunt and spectral, and the healthy flush of manhood turns to the sallow, haggard visage of the invalid. Cough takes the place of conversation, speech gives way to spitting, the repulsive odors of chronic catarrh poison the kiss of the fondest lovers, and thickened membranes bedim sight, impair hearing and destroy taste. Like the plague-stricken Egyptians, a cry of distress has gone out from every household, and the mildew of woe clings to every hearthstone. Catarrh in some form, catarrh in some stage, lurks an enemy in the slightest cough or cold, and finishes its fiendish work in heart disease and consumption. No tissue, function or organ of the body escapes its ravages; muscles wither, nerves shatter, and secretions dry up under its blighting presence. So stubborn and difficult of cure is this disease that to invent a remedy to cure chronic catarrh has been the ambition of the greatest minds in all ages.

Is it therefore, any wonder that the vast multitude of people who have been cured of chronic catarrh by Pe-ru-na are so lavish in their praises of this remedy? That the discovery of Pe-ru-na has made the cure of catarrh a practical certainty is not only the testimony of the people, but many medical men declare it to be true.

As no drug store in this age of the world is complete without Pe-ru-na, it can be obtained anywhere, with directions for use. A complete guide to the prevention and cure of catarrh and all disease of winter sent free by The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Co., Columbus, O.

THE COUNCIL CASES.

The Convicted Members and Motions for New Trials.

The verdict of the jury rendered at exactly 3:15 p. m. yesterday in convicting George M. Doner, member of the council from the Fifth ward, consummates the successful prosecution of a series of bribery cases involving and disrupting a conspiracy in municipal affairs, the records of which will make an important epoch in the history of crime and its prosecution in the state of Ohio.

The relentless prosecution of these cases acted as an electrical storm upon a murky and impure atmosphere.

A motion for new trial has been filed in each of the six cases that have been tried.

On next Tuesday these motions will be heard and disposed of.

If new trials are not granted judgment will then be passed.

This will occur next week, very probably upon Wednesday or Thursday, but not before.

On motion of counsel a stay of judgment may be granted by the court covering a period of not over 40 days, to allow time for the defense to establish proceedings in error in circuit court.

HUNGARIAN RETICENCE.

Police Inquiry Into a Row After a Wedding.

An interpreter was used in police court this morning in the case against Joseph Solonski and Joseph Menar, arrested by Officer Kujawa for participation in a disturbance at a Hungarian saloon at Ironville. There was a Hungarian wedding that night and someone came into the saloon and said someone else wanted to put a knife into the bridegroom. Solonski went out to see what the row was and was hit on the head with a stone. Menar seized a club and rushed out to assist his friend. There were six or eight in the melee, but Kujawa could only secure two. Efforts to find the names of others or any particulars were unavailing, though it was said one man was cut. The Huns would not give each other away. The case was continued till Monday, to try and get further evidence.

Farrell's Industry.

Martin Farrell, arrested the other day and slated for "suspicion," has been looked up by the detectives to some purpose. He is now accused of grand larceny, in retaining money collected for Grover Whitman, and stealing clothing and articles from several places to the value of $150. He waived examination this morning in police court and was held in $1,000 bail.

A Group of Attractions the world over. If women would remember that to be thoroughly healthy, that to be fleshy yet not fat; to have that bright complexion and brilliant eye of perfect health, it is only necessary to sleep, eat, and digest well. Johann Hoff's Malt Extract makes the digestion perfect. This then compels you to eat and sleep well. Consequently the genuine Johann Hoff's Malt Extract makes women beautiful and attractive. Try it. The genuine have the signature of "Johann Hoff" on the neck of the bottle. Eisner & Mendelson Co., N. Y., Sole Agents.

WHAT IS THE USE

Of your buying a lot 2 or 3 miles out in the country when you can get a lot for the same price in Gardner Heights, which is directly opposite the foot of Madison and Jefferson streets? You will soon save the price of a lot in car fare. We have other places to show you. We have a few good houses for sale. Do you want one of them?

HEADACHE, SLEEPLESSNESS, NERVOUS PROSTRATION.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

Gentlemen: I take pleasure in informing you of the very beneficial results which have followed the use of DR. MILES' RESTORATIVE NERVINE in the case of myself and wife. For a year I was subject to a distressing pain at the base of the brain and upper portion of the spinal cord. I lost flesh and was greatly troubled with sleeplessness. Your Nervine was highly recommended to me. My case had been so obstinate that I had no confidence in the efficacy of any medicine. Yet as a last resort I consented to give it a trial. Much to my surprise, I experienced marked benefit; my sleeplessness disappeared; my headache was removed; my spirits and general health greatly improved. I SOON GAINED TWENTY POUNDS. ALL THIS OCCURRED AFTER LEARNED AND WELL KNOWN PHYSICIANS HAD FAILED. My wife is taking the Nervine with the best of results. LOUIS D. VANDERVERE.

FIGURING FOR A SENSATION.

Jellico, Tenn., Nov. 26.—Sid Worthen, station agent of the East Tennessee, Virginia & Georgia and Louisville & Nashville railroads, left the depot at 10 o'clock last night, and was later found dead in the kitchen of Dr. J. L. Rose's residence. The killing occurred in the house of Mrs. A. L. Jones. The coroner held an inquest and ordered the arrest of James McMillan, of Lancaster, Ky., as the murderer. There is talk of lynching McMillan and tearing down the house of the Jones woman.

MANY LEFT OUT.

Homestead, Pa., Nov. 26.—About a dozen strikers applied at the Carnegie mills to-day for employment. They received very little encouragement. There have been about 1,700 men thus far who have applied for work, and less than 20 per cent. have been successful.

On Monday the mills which have been running two turns of 12 hours each, will be put on three turns. This will require about one-third more men.

The Stage, Darwin and the Future.

Was Solomon a Tiresome Old Frump?

Our Special Follies, Pen-Dipping in Honey—Humanity's Touch—Do Souls Shake Hands?

(Copyrighted, 1892, by the Bok Syndicate Press, N. Y.)

Special Correspondence Bee:

New York, Nov. 25.

In these days, when the newspapers are filled with everybody's and nobody's opinions of the state of the country; everybody's and nobody's opinions of the republicans and democrats; everybody's and nobody's predictions for the future, it is perfectly delightful to meet somebody who didn't even know there had been an election. I tell you, my friends, I felt like hugging the woman who said that she had been so occupied in reading the life of Darwin that she had no time to think of small matters! My respect for that woman was immense. I never had read Darwin, and never expect to, but I felt that he had not lived in vain if he could take one woman out of the hurly-burly so completely that she could know nothing of politics. The way I came to meet her was a little funny. I adore short stories. I danced with delight when I heard that the dearest of all short stories, "My Disreputable Friend, Mr. Reagan," had been dramatized, and that Sothern, the bright actor, was to be that particularly delicious tough. Of course, the afternoon it was to be presented it rained; however, with a stormcoat and an umbrella to protect me, and my own sweet self for company, I went to the theater. I saw Mr. Reagan himself without any doubt. I heard him talk just as the toughs do talk, and I saw how the man triumphed over the brute, and how, for the sake of a little child, an ignorant boy gave himself up, to face, perhaps the gallows. It was a wonderful picture; it was what photographers call life-like, and when the curtain dropped on "Mr. Reagan" I was thinking to myself how few of us managed to discover the heart of gold when its outside cover was one of dirt and roughness.

How This Woman Did Gush.

Just then a voice beside me said: "Do you think that such pictures of low life are elevating?" I very vaguely said I did not know, and energetically wiped the tears from my eyes. From that time on I was at the mercy of the woman next to me. She told me how she divided her day, the hours she devoted to reading, the books she thought proper to read; she gave me pointers on different plays, said she saw I wasn't in the habit of going to the theater and advised me if I ever got a chance, to go to see Georgia Cayvan. I thanked her and looked crushed. Then I summed up the small amount of bravery I had and said something about the election. She looked at me vacantly and asked: "Has there been one?" And I told her I thought there had. Then she patronized me to a degree that was wonderful. She said the women of the country were wasting their time reading newspapers; she also explained to me the difference between an intelligent and an intellectual person, she told me how anti-pyrine affected her husband, and how she never would take morphia. She condescendingly approved of the theater, and said there were people, who, not being able to fill their life with culture, probably gained something from the stage.

I never knew a woman who talked so much in my life, and when I got home I assembled my family in a row and asked:

"Do I Look Like a Fool?"

After a wavering sort of a negative it was agreed that I didn't look any more like one than usual, and then I asked: "Why did this woman seize me as her victim?" The masculine part of the family said it was because I was polite and listened—the feminine thought it was because I was sympathetic, but I think it was because I was a bit of a fool, and the woman who had read Darwin recognized this quality in me. There are so many different kinds of fools, you know. There is the intellectual fool, who makes you take knowledge as if it were a dose of castor oil until you wish the alphabet had never been invented. There is the aggressive fool who walks around with a chip on the shoulder, boiling for a fight. There is the athletic fool, who thinks the country will be saved by a football and cricket. There is the political fool, who has just comprehended that the people of the United States will do what they feel like without consulting him. There is the vain fool, who believes that because she looks pretty everybody else ought to be happy. There is the professional fool, who believes that outside of the law, medicine or the church there are no gentlemen. There is the fool with a fad, who is convinced that the only true enjoyment is gotten in a way directed by him. There is the rich fool, who overrates the value of money; and who thinks it can buy wisdom. Then there is the all-around fool, for whom we all have a sort of an affection, because he is so ready to coincide with our own weaknesses. Every blessed one of us, you know, is a bit of a fool. We would be horrible bores if we weren't.

What Is Your Special Folly?

It is that little leaven of folly that makes us fond of each other. I have always had an idea that Solomon must have been a tiresome old frump. Fancy being married to the wisest man in the world! Why, it would demoralize any woman; she would spend all her time trying to make a fool of him. But what's your special folly? Is it a nice one? Is it one that is interesting to other people? Just between you and me I will tell you what mine are. My own two special follies that I hug up and love, and wouldn't part with for anything in the world. The first is a good novel, the second is a good play. I was born with these follies attached to me. I love them dearly, and I can laugh or cry over either of them as occasion demands. And I love my own dear follies so much that I pray I may have them always with me. Sometimes the novel isn't good, sometimes the play isn't good. That merely whets my appetite for the delights when they do come. You need not think they don't, Mr. Cynic, for they do. I saw a good play yesterday afternoon, a play written by a man who has given more delight to me and catered more to my own special follies than anybody I know—in a pen and ink way—and that man is Jerome K. Jerome. He dips his pen in honey, and then, with it he pictures the

Good Side of Human Nature, and if he fears goodness may pall he doesn't take some nasty acid for a flavor. Oh, no! He selects a delightful spice, a clove or a little bit of cinnamon, that quickens your taste and makes the honey seem better than ever. The play was called "The Councillor's Wife." It was a story of the people that you and I meet; people who are poor, and who are in love; people who are good, and people who are so philanthropic that they will assume all responsibilities of somebody elses bank account until in time it becomes their very own. There was in the play the picture of an elderly gentleman, whose heart went out to a pretty young girl, and who thought he could make her happiest if he made her his wife; he discovered before he did this that she loved somebody else better than she did him, then he was unselfish enough to think of her happiness and to make her pathway smooth. In writing up this little story, Mr. Jermone did that marvelous thing, he touched the face of humanity with the wand of laughter, just deep enough to make dimples, and then he made a vapor come over the eyes so that there were only tears enough to fill them. It's a wonderful art, this being able to bring tears or smiles at will. And it is all the more wonderful when men and women like ourselves can portray these emotions so that we feel them and feel them keenly.

"Do I LLook Like a Fool?"

Our Joys and Sorrows Defined.

My friend, if you are in harmony with the rest of the world, you want to see this new play. If you are a man it will make you feel like putting your arms around the woman you love and holding her close to you; and if you are a woman you will long to put your hand, even in the theater, on the arm of the man you love and be glad that he is near you. And then you will laugh—good, honest, merry laughs. Laughs at benevolent frauds, laughs at the concert hall singer, whose great desire in life was to be respectable, and who was getting too much of it. Laughs at the rich girl who so cleverly pretended her money was lost that she might get from the man she loved an avowal of his affection for her. It's a combination of joy and sorrow, this play I like, with only just enough sorrow to make you comprehend how delightful is the joy.

It is probible that your folly differs from mine, but if we happen to be in harmony, let's conclude that our souls have shaken hands. I wonder if souls do shake hands. Some people shake hands as if they had no souls, and it is just possible that souls have no hands. Don't you know the man or woman who takes hold of your hand in a nice sort of way, gives it a flirt and then drops it? Don't you know the one that grabs hold of of it as if it were a pump handle and works your arm up and down as if it were to result in fresh water coming out of your mouth? Don't you know the one who gently lifts your hand and gently drops it as if undue exercise would result fatally, and don't you know that dear delightful person (I hate that word person, but there is no other to use when you mean men and women too) who takes hold of your hand, gives it a sympathetic squeeze, and makes you feel as if you had been inoculated with friendship and good feeling? That's a hand-shaking worth while. Perhaps souls will only flap their wings at each other; but I suppose that's the sort of thing that no fellow can find out yet awhile.

Rendering Our Thanks.

Goodness, gracious! it is time, by the command of the President of the United States, for us to be thankful! It's a precious kind of thankfulness that only expresses itself once a year; however, if it is the law, I suppose it's to be done.

The republicans have got to be thankful that they are alive.

The democrats have got to be thankful that "We are the people."

The men have got to be thankful that the country is prosperous.

The women have got to be thankful for the men.

The children have got to be thankful that milk is cheap.

The girls have got to be thankful that soon they can get imported gowns without paying any duty.

The dudes have got to be thankful "that Poole, don't you know, makes my trousers, and that a gentleman can dress properly, don't you know, without having to pay any damn duty, don't you know."

The people who are elected are thankful for they think they got in on their own merits.

The people who didn't get in are thankful because they can blame Mr. McKinley.

The editors are thankful because the same old Thanksgiving editorial revamped can be now used again.

The actors are thankful because I am alive—it's a great blessing to be permitted to live when you don't care for Darwin; when you'd just as lief, and "liefer" be intelligent rather than intellectual, and when you do love fools and their folly.

I am thankful because I have a good cook; I am thankful that coal remains stationary; that you can get cream if you pay the price for it, and that hot bread has never interferred with my digestion. I've so much to be thankful for, that I have set aside a special day of my own for thanksgiving purposes. I shall make it a point to enjoy myself on that day. I shall eat of the good meat of the canvas-back, and hire a messenger boy to damn turkey. I shall drink of the fruit of the vine and get an able-bodied Irishman to use expressive language on the subject of prohibition; and I shall be merry. Merriment is the best expression of thanks—yes, it is my friend; yes, it is. I'm a bit of a fool but that's true as sure as my name is BAB.

HE CARED FOR HIS FRIEND.

A Horse Keeps Faithful Watch Over a Blind Comrade.

I will tell you a little incident that came under my observation, says a correspondent. I stopped at a farm house and the farmer was the owner of a pair of chest nut horses named Doll and Jack. He had raised them from colts, had always stabled and driven them together, and they were consequently much attached to each other. He turned them out to pasture, and while wandering around the fields I noticed the incident. Doll has been blind several years, but she never betrayed it by her gait while traveling. In the pasture she would sometimes become separated from her mate, and as soon as she discovered it she would commence to search for him. Sometimes she would whinny and he would respond to her, when she would go directly to him, and when she found him they would rub their noses together.

At other times Jack would not answer, but would stop eating, raise his head, and watch the course his blind mate would take—back and forth across the pasture, each time turning toward the left and nearing the fence at each turn. Frequently she would stop and listen. If she was nearing the mischevious Jack he would stand perfectly still, but if she was some distance away he would stamp his feet two or three times when Doll was listening. She was always sure of finding him, though sometimes it would take an hour to do it, and then they would go away side by side, cropping the fresh grass. When they went to the spring in one corner of the lot to drink Jack always led the way, and he would stand beside the trough and call to his mate until she stood beside him, and both would drink together.

One day a terrible racket was heard in the pasture, and it was kept up so long that one of the men was sent to see what it was all about. Doll had gotten one of her feet caught in the spokes of an old wagon wheel that lay in the pasture. She stood very still and quiet in the trap into which she had walked, while Jack was thrashing around the pasture and neighing as though he had been hired to rouse the neighborhood. Doll was released, while Jack stood by and watched the operation with apparent delight that was manifested with a wild gallop around the lot when she was once more free.

EMPEROR WILLIAM'S NEW TOY.

The emperor of Germany has just placed upon the wall of his study a large photograph of which he is very proud. It is a portrait, half life-size, of the biggest and the smallest soldier of the Prussian army standing side by side. The former is Private Pritzchan of the First regiment of the Prussian guard. He stands 6 feet 7 3-4 inches in his boots, and when he presented himself at Dusseldorf for examination a special apparatus had to be provided with which to take his waist measure. His breadth is in proportion to his height. The smallest soldier is the hereditary prince. The picture is a unique one, showing a veritable giant, quite equal to any that figure in "Grimm's Tales" or any other books of fables, and by his side a soldierly Lilputian.

The Danes were accustomed to eat six times a day.

FAMOUS JAIL BREAKERS.

How Sharkey Evaded the Hangman —Billy Porter's Coolness.

One of the most remarkable escapes from prison which have ever been recorded was that which occurred in the Tombs, in New York, in 1873. This resulted in William J. Sharkey, bank roober and murderer, gaining his liberty through the clever co-operation of his sweetheart. On the morning of Nov. 19, 1873, a young woman might have been seen waiting on the sidewalk in front of the Tombs to be in readiness when the keeper opened the big iron gate to admit friends of the prisoners. When 10 o'clock came the gate swung open and the throng passed in. Among them was a young woman who had become familiar to the keepers by reason of her any calls to see Sharkey. Her beautifully pathetic face seemed to have excited sympathy in the hearts of the keepers, who are generally supposed to be steeled against such emotions, for they neglected to search her as carefully as they should have done. She received her entrance ticket and passed into the corridor and to cell No. 40. This woman was the famous Maggie Jourdon. She carried on her person on this occasion two sets of raiments. One of these was quickly transferred and donned by Sharkey. He then took a key which Maggie handed him, unlocked the cell door, passed in the corridor and out of the prison, Maggie having previously made her exit. Sharkey's disguise consisted of a dark woolen dress, black cloak and Alpine hat, black green veil, which he kept close to his face. Of course there must have been an admittance ticket short, but this fact was developed a half hour after Sharkey had made his exit. At that time Mrs. Wes Allen, who had been visiting a prisoner, attempted to pass the keeper.

"Your ticket, please," said Keeper Kennedy.

The woman stopped, put her hand in her pocket and, after fumbling about her clothing, exclaimed:

"Why, I must have lost it. I'm sure I put it in my pocket."

Keeper Kennedy, however, was not moved by this statement. Mrs. Allen was detained, the cells were immediately searched and then it was discovered that Sharkey's cell was empty. The door was open and the late prisoner's clothing lay on the floor. On a little shelf were found some locks of hair, which were supposed to be Sharkey's mustache, which had been shaved off to complete his disguise. The key which unlocked he cell was made from a wax impression obtained by Maggie on a previous visit. Mrs. Wes Allen was arrested for complicity in the escape of Sharkey, but no actual proof could be found against her and she was discharged. Maggie Jourdan was arrested and tried, but the jury failed to agree in her case, so that no one was punished for this escape from the Tombs, which was certainly one of the boldest and at the same time one of the most adroit on record. Sharkey was not recaptured. It is supposed that he remained in New York for three or four weeks and then went on board a schooner bound for Baracoa, Cuba. From Baracoa he went to Havana, where two years later he was joined by Maggie Jourdan, whose love for the outlaw seems to have remained undimmed through the months of separation. Her devotion, however, was poorly requited, for Sharkey abused her and after a time she returned to New York.

While the escape from prison just related was remarkable, it did not compare for coolness with the exploit of Billy Porter and John Irving, who walked out of Raymond street jail on June 1, 1879. They were arrested on August 11, 1878, for burglary. Porter had been tried and found guilty and was awaiting sentence. It was early in May on the date named when Porter and Irving, who were in the habit of going into the kitchen to have their cups filled with coffee, made their appearance upon their usual errand. These noted criminals, however, coolly put their cups down upon the table and in the presence of the astonished cooks walked across the kitchen and up the stairway leading to the jail yard. Having reached this point they walked boldly across and entered the stable yard, where there were some men at work. At this point there was a loud knocking heard coming from the outside, which was probably made by confederates and which had the desired effect of diverting the attention of the workmen about the stable yard. Thus Porter and Irving were enabled to cross the yard unmolested to an excavation which was being made, through which they made their final exit to liberty. It was afterward learned that the two men walked along Raymond street to DeKalb avenue, where they received two coats from confederates who were waiting for them and then all further traces of them were lost. The subsequent history of these notorious criminals is familiar.—Brooklyn Eagle.

WHY SHE LOST HIM.

By B. C.

"Will you buy a pin-cushion, sir?"

William Campbell stopped short in the quick walk, and looked in the face of the poor woman who addressed him. She was small and thin, with a dreary expression of pain on her faded features. Her clothes were worn and scant, but ill calculated to shield her from the cold wind that swept by her at every moment. Poor as they were, they were clean and neatly mended. She seemed to have stopped Campbell in a moment of desperation, as gentlemen are often interested in pin-cushions and needle-books, and when he scanned her from head to foot, she went on hurriedly, in a low, broken voice, which was interrupted every little while with a deep, consumptive cough:

"I am sorry to trouble you, sir, but I thought you looked kind, and I haven't a penny to pay the rent of my room. I must pay to-morrow, or be turned out, and one of my children is lying in it very sick."

"How much is this one?" asked Campbell, holding up the largest in her basket.

"Two dollars," she answered.

He took a roll of bills from his pocket, and put the amount in her hand, at the same time transferring the bright silken purchase to the pocket of his overcoat.

"Why don't you go to a more crowded street?" he asked. "You might do better there than in a private one like this."

She shook her head sadly.

"So I do, sir; but I was doing some plain sewing for Miss Steele, and I came to-day, hoping she would be able to pay me for it."

"Does Miss Steele live here?" asked Campbell, looking at the house they were standing before.

"No, sir; she lives two or three doors down; but I had no breakfast this morning, and I was obliged to sit down and rest on those steps."

"Where do you live?" was the next question. "I will ask my mother to look up some sewing for you."

He took her address and said good morning. The poor woman looked after him with a blessing on her lips, and tears in the dim eyes; then she turned homewards, her thin clothes fluttering in the wintry air. Meanwhile Campbell passed two of the houses in the row, ran up the steps of the third, and rang the bell. He was shown into a very handsomely furnished room, and while he waited for the lady he had called to see, his quick eyes took in the cost of the things around him. Certainly they showed no want of money. They were well chosen, well contrasted. Elegantly bound editions of standard works lay on the tables; the pictures on the walls were exquisite engravings of rare old masters.

The open piano was costly, the music expensive, and beside him on the sofa lay an afghan half completed, the bright wools composing it flashing out from the dark background. Could it be possible that the poor needlewoman's words were true, and that the owner of all this comfort had refused to pay her a few dollars? Why, the double zephyr beside him cost at least ten or twelve. He came to the conclusion that Miss Steele had run short of money, and was obliged to dismiss the poor woman empty-handed as she came.

In the midst of his reflections Miss Steele entered. A pretty girl, with bright eyes and dark hair, half-covered with a net, from which bright glass beads shook and sparkled. Her handsome morning dress fitted to perfection the round, beautiful figure, and the little soft hand she held out to Mr. Campbell glittered with rings. He saw the bright flush that spread over her face, and felt quite flattered by it. She took up her fancy work, and while he talked and explained the object of his early visit, her fingers were busy among the bright wools. In fact, Mr. William Campbell had called at 10 o'clock that cold November morning to invite Miss Steele to go to the opera with him that evening. She accepted the invitation with pleasure, but remarked that a cousin of hers from Boston was spending the week with her. Mr. Campbell wished for an introduction, and included the young lady in his invitation.

Now, this cousin of Miss Steele's, when she came into the room, quite astonished some nor ugly—nice-looking expressed it all. She was knitting a stocking—so was Mr. Campbell. She was neither hand-

For the nurse-maid of fashion a touch of color is sometimes introduced into the cap and apron. A new cap which is easily laundered has a puffed crown. The cap is of dotted Swiss muslin. The crescent in front is of plain muslin. There are long strings in the back, which, when untied, make the crown quite flat. The crown may be puffed again by means of the hidden draw-string. Sometimes the muslin has a colored dot. In this case the same color is introduced slightly into the apron, as a finish to the ruffles, for instance.

A Wise Servant.

"Suppose," said the lady—"now only suppose, understand—that you were carrying a piece of steak from the kitchen, and by accident should let it slip from the plate to the floor, what would you do in such a case?"

The girl looked the lady square in the eye for a moment before saying:

"Is it a private family, or are there boarders?"

"Boarders," answered the lady.

"Pick it up and put it back on the plate," firmly replied the girl. She was engaged.

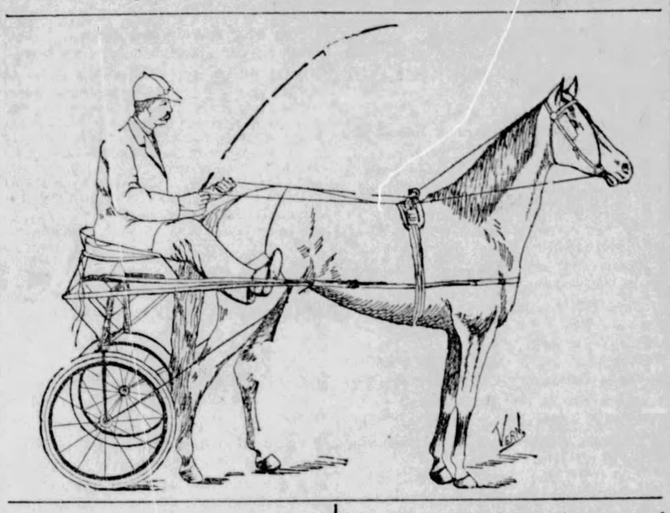
MAUD S. TO TROT AGAIN.

To Be Sent Before a Pneumatic-Tire Sulky to Beat Nancy Hanks' Record

It will be a source of great satisfaction to all true lovers of sport, whether horsemen or otherwise, to know that Mr. Robert Bonner is not at all convinced that Nancy Hanks is the fastest trotter in the world, and has decided to get Maud S. into condition again and race her to a bicycle sulky, to beat all previous records. While admitting that Nancy Hanks is a wonderful performer, Mr. Bonner thinks that a great deal of the speed which she has shown in recent trials has been due to mechanical improvements in track and sulky, and he says that when Maud made her record she did not have the advantage of these new-fangled notions.

Maud S. is at present at Mr. Bonner's farm in Westchester county, where she has been leading a quiet domestic life. As is generally known, she has been bred twice, but in neither case has she been with foal. This is what decided Mr. Bonner to hook her up once more to a sulky. Some time ago he ordered a new set of harness for the mare, and week before last he drove her around the track for the first time in months. Under favorable conditions he hopes to have her in shape for speeding next season, when he thinks that with the assistance of a pneumatic-tire sulky and other improvements the well-beloved Maud will have no difficulty in beating Nancy Hanks' time. The failure of Maud S. to be with foal is attributed by Mr. Bonner to her high-strung, nervous condition, resulting from her long training as a speed mare. Before she is allowed to be bred again he intends to let her have a long rest.

It will be remembered that some time since Mr. Bonner made an offer of $5,000 to the owner or trainer who should beat Maud S.'s record. Mr. J. Malcolm Forbes, owner of Nancy Hanks, acknowledges that he has no claim to this money, because Nancy Hanks' fast time was not made on one of the grand circuit tracks, as Mr. Bonner had stipulated. Mr. Forbes further says, in a card to the public that "if it were true, as stated, that Mr. Bonner withheld the $5,000 because the mile was trotted in a bicycle sulky I should be much surprised, as Mr. Bonner ought to have known when he made the offer that the increase in speed was going to be made in the future, as it has been in the past, by improvement in pedigree, improvement in track, sulky and harness and improvement in handling."



On the strength of this card it is in order for Mr. Forbes to be surprised because Mr. Bonner withheld the $5,000 for just the reason which is here stated. Mr. Bonner further declares that he did not offer the money as an inducement to persons engaged in mechanical pursuits or in devising mechanical improvements. He intended it an incentive to breeders to produce finer stock. Mr. Bonner has stated very fully to the Sunday World his reasons for bringing Maud S. out of retirement when most persons thought her days as a speed mare were over. He has also unbosomed himself in regard to pneumatic tires, Indiana tracks and other matters of vital interest to horsemen.

"My chief reason," he says, "for bringing Maud S. before the public again is to show Mr. Forbes and others that she is still the queen of the trotting world and that I was perfectly justified in not paying out that $5,000, as some persons think I should have done. There is no doubt in my mind that Maud can lower her own record many seconds in front of a bicycle sulky, provided, of course she can be got into condition. If she can make a mile in Nancy Hanks' time or less, under the same conditions, then there will be no question as to which is the faster, and the public will know that I was perfectly right in refusing the money for the horse which should be the faster, not necessarily the one which should make the fastest time. You see you might put a horse on an express train and it would go a mile very fast.

"There is a greater difference than is generally supposed between the old and the new fashioned sulky. In the latter the trotter, besides having a lighter weight to pull, is able to move at a perfectly pure gait. When drawing the ordinary sulky the heavier load gives the horse a tendency to throw out the hind legs further than he would otherwise do. This makes his gait strained and unnatural. The advantages derived by the trotter from the bicycle sulky are the same as when trotting hooked up with a running mate. In that case the runner at every leap forward takes the sulky along with him, leaving the trotter free to move in a perfectly natural manner. The new style of sulky will in time do away altogether with any necessity for weights and bandages, which were used in order to counteract the tendency to an unnatural gait.

"The end has not been reached in pneumatic-tire sulkies. It will be observed that Nancy Hanks, Stamboul, Mascot and other so-called record breakers have been doing all their fast time within the past few months. I have seen several interesting editorials, which have said that performances indicate a rapid advancement in the science of breeding. I tell you that it is all nonsense. They simply indicate that man is a clever creature, especially in America. There is no reason why the pneumatic-tire sulky should not go on improving until next year, when we shall have one which can be drawn by Nancy Hanks or other fast ones in less than two minutes. You may depend upon it that when Maud S. is ready for her trial she shall want nothing in the way of mechanical appliances. There may be something invented by that time which will push the hors along from behind.

"I wish also to remark," continued Mr. Bonner, "that the soil in Indiana is of a peculiar elastic character. It is springy, like rubber, and permits of very fast time being made over it. Why, just look at those two bicyclists, Zimmerman and Johnston. Zimmerman is, I believe, considered to be much the superior, but the other man beat his record several seconds, simply because he had the advantage of the Indiana soil."

In order to offset this advantage, Mr. Bonner is making arrangements to improve his own track. Owing to the long dry spell, the track became as hard as a bone, and none of the animals at the farm would extend itself over it. Down in a grove near the Sound there was found some rich, fertilizing soil made up of generations of decayed leaves. Great quantities of this soil have been dug up and scattered over the track by a patented distributer. The time and expense incurred by the operation are great, but they go to show how earnest Mr. Bonner is in his determination to vindicate Maud S.'s title to the queenship of trotters.

SCAGG'S MARE POLLY.

They were talking about horses, and more particularly about Nancy Hanks' wonderful record of 2:05 1-4. Every one seemed to be more or less impressed with the marvellousness of this record except old Mr. Scaggs, a retired farmer.

"She's fast, yes," he said. "But I oncet owned a mare up on the farm as could beat her. That mare was lightnin' on legs. Polly was her name—named after Mrs. Scaggs' mother, and a finer woman you never met. She could bake all around any other woman in the county, an' when it came to me bein' sick, she'd nurse me tenderlier han as if I wasn't a son-in-law at all, but her own boy. My, how she could trot!"

"Your mother-in-law?" asked one of the circle.

"No; the hoss," snapped Scaggs, with fire in his eye. "I'm talkin' about the hoss. I bought her when she was eight years old from old Mrs. Tompkins. She wasn't much on looks, Mrs. Thompkins wasn't, but she was business all through. When her husband died she took charge of the grocery, an' added a millinery department to it, an' by Joe! inside of a year she was able to close up the grocery 'nd do nothin' but make hats. Tompkins used to hitch her up to the delivery wagon, you know, but of course—"

"You don't mean to say that any man was ever mean enough to hitch his wife up to a grocery wagon, and make her haul the packages about town?" queried the inquisitive member of the party.

"'Ain't said nothin' o' the kind," retorted Scaggs. "Don't you get too funny, I'm talkin' about the hoss. I was goin' on to tell ye how when old Mrs. Tompkins got makin' two-dollar hats for the women folks 'nd sellin' 'em to 'em for ten, she give up the grocery business, 'nd so didn't have any use for the hoss old Tompkins had used for drivin' his delivery wagon. It happened I wanted a hoss 'bout that time, 'nd so I called on old Mrs. Tompkins to talk it over. She was only eight years old at the time, and hadn't much style about her, though she was calculated to be faster'n anything else in town. I ast old Mrs. Tompkins what she'd take, 'nd she says $24.

"'That's pretty high for an eight-year-old,' says I. 'I'll give ye a dollar 'nd a half a year for the hoss. That's $12.'

"'Make it two, and she's yours,' says old Mrs. Tompkins.

"'Throw in a hat for my wife,' says I, 'and it goes.'

"'Done,' says she.

"So I bridled her, paid the money, 'nd led her home. Few days later some o' the boys, knowin' as I had spatin' blood, came an' ast me to let Polly trot on a mile track for the record. My wife didn't want me to at first, because she was a little off her feed, 'nd didn't approve of racin' anyhow, but when the boys offered a purse of $10 if she could beat 2:10, she let up. So I said all right, 'nd we set a date."

"Well, what was the result?" asked the inquisitive youth.

"Two four for the mile," said Scaggs.

"Two four?" cried the whole circle at once.

"Yep," said Scaggs. "But it was the track as helped her. There was somethin' in the track as had ought to be give some o' the credit, for the old mare couldn't beat more'n four minutes at the County Fair grounds."

"What was the special quality of the track, Scaggs?" asked one of the party.

"Waal," said Scaggs, slowly, "as far as I could make out, a mile on our track warn't more'n half a mile on any other."

PARISIAN STREETS.

How They Are Kept so Beautiful—An Object Lesson.

A Boston banker bought for three cents two delicious pears, felicitating himself upon his cheap acquisition for three cents of what at the hotel dinner was served at one franc. The delicious fruit proved too much of a temptation. One pear disappeared, and the core being thrown upon the sidewalk, a military looking policeman politely interrupted a threatened disposal of the other pear by informing the economical millionaire that it was not permitted to put nuisances upon the streets.

The banker insisted upon his right to eat his fruit wherever he choose, had begun munching the second, when the officer called a cab, invited my friend into it, and informed me upon my offering to accompany them that I could follow in another cab. I replied that I preferred to share the disgrace and fate of my comrade, and would accompany him. At the hearing the justice released the latter without a fine upon his payment for the cab, as he was a stranger and this was his first offense.

A similar fate to the Bostonian's and a fine also overtook a broad-shouldered, bull-necked, two-headed Ohioan, who insisted upon standing in a tramway car when it was "complete." A seat in an omnibus here confers as exclusive a proprietary right as a box at the opera. No one is permitted to stand in a car, because that may inconvenience others. Strange as it may appear to the directors of American street car companies, in France the transportation of persons for hire is subject to laws which may not be violated with impunity.

The city has 20 wards, each governed by a mayor and two deputies. On a superficies of about 45,000 square yards it has some 80,000 houses, containing 2,250,000 inhabitants. The Taxpayers' Association of Baltimore will hold its breath to hear that this vast system, with its water supplies, its streets, avenues and boulevards as wide as Broadway and as smooth as glass; its police, fire and telegraph departments, with the fortifications, squares, statues, wharves, bridges, museums, markets, arches, railways, systems of public instructions and an endless variety of amusements, parks, music, theaters and other luxuries which it has never entered the poor imagination of the downtrodden American tax-payer even to conceive of, was furnished last year by the city government at the trifling cost to the city of 230,892,550 francs of the value of 20 cents each.

One key unlocked the mysterious cabinet of the administration of Paris—economy. The French meaning of that term can never be comprehended in America. It is not meanness. Economy here receives and gives value for value. There is not an overworked employe or a supernumerary in the whole department of the municipal government of Paris. Every detail is accounted for at the close of each day.—Baltimore Sun.

A splendid way to improve the memory is to begin by treating it as if it were another person, and charging it, upon penalty of a severe upbraiding, to keep until wanted the information, fact, date, name, or whatever is to be remembered. In this course you unconsciously do two things—you sort out things worth while to know and you impress them upon the memory in such a way as to cause it to grasp and keep them. The latter is a most important thing to do. Half of one's forgetfulness comes from failure to properly grasp what it is you are to remember. It is said of Tom Reed, who was speaker of the house of representatives for two years, that he considered it a great hardship to have to tell a man the same thing twice. You ought never to cause any such hardship.

FOSTER'S FORECASTS.

What the Weather Portends for the Next Week.

All Parts of the Country Are Included in the Predictions.

Entertaining Gossip on a Subject of Great Interest to All Readers of the Bee.

Copyrighted, 1892, by W. T. Foster.

St. Joseph, Mo., Nov. 26.—My last bulletin gave forecasts for the storm wave to cross the continent from November 28 to December 2, and the next will reach the Pacific coast about December 2, cross the western mountains by the close of the 3d, the great central valleys from 4th to 6th, and the eastern states about the 7th.

This will be a severe storm, at its greatest force in the Mississippi valley about the 5th, and will cause heavy snows and rains. Its path will lie well to the north.

The cold wave following this storm will be of considerable force and will cause snows on its front. It will cross the western mountains about the 5th, the great central valleys about the 7th and the eastern states about the 9th.

Severe weather in the Mississippi valley is expected from November 29 to December 1.

Those who desire information as to local weather conditions for the winter, or for next year's crop, may write me, enclosing a stamp.

The Aztec Prayer.

It is claimed by many that the Aztecs are the old at race of people on earth, and their records and traditions sound much like those of Genesis and Job. Their historical legends divide the past time of their race into four epochs, ages or suns. The first of these ages terminated, according to Gama, in a destruction of the people of the world by famine; the second in a destruction by winds; in the third the human race was swept away by fire, and the fourth was a destruction by water. The Hindoo legends are very similar.

The Aztec prayer is a most remarkable piece of literature, and was evidently offered and perfected during a long continued pestilence. It is sublime in thought and language and, like the hymns of the Vedas and prayers of the Hebrews, has been handed down for thousands of years. As evidence that the human race on the western hemisphere was destroyed by a comet I give the following extracts from this ancient, wonderful and sublime Aztec prayer as translated into the English language:

"O Lord, thou hast held it good to forsake us in these days according to the counsel Thou hast as well in heaven as in hades. Alas for us, that Thine anger and indignation has descended upon us in these days; alas in that the many and grevious afflictions of thy wrath have overgone and swallowed us up, coming down even as stones, spears and arrows upon the wretches that inhabit the earth. This is the sore pestilence with which we are afflicted and almost destroyed.

"A great destruction the rain and pestilence already make in this nation and what is more pitiful of all, the little children that are innocent and understand nothing, they too die, broken and dashed to pieces as against stones and a wall, and there remain of them not even those in their cradles. Of young and old, men and women there remain neither root nor branch; thy nation, thy people, thy wealth, are leveled down and destroyed.

"The fire of the pestilence, made exceedingly hot, is upon thy nation, burning and smoking as a fire in a hut, leaving nothing upright and sound. The grinders of thy teeth (falling stones) are employed and thy bitter whips upon the miserable people who have become lean. Hast thou altogether forsaken thy nation and thy people? Hast thou verily determined that it perish and that there be no more memory of it in the world, that the peopled places become a wooded hill and a wilderness of stones?

"Is it already fixed in thy divine counsel that there is to be no mercy nor pity for us until the arrows of thy fury are spent to our utter perdition and destruction, that the sun shall never more shine upon us, but that we must remain in perpetual darkness and silence? O our Lord, thine arrows and stones have sorely hurt this poor people.

"O most strong Lord make an end of this fog and smoke of thy resentment, quench also thy burning and destroying fire of thine anger, let serenity and clearness come, let the small birds of thy people begin to sing and to approach the sun; give them quiet weather, so that they may cause their voices to reach Thy highness."

It may appear wonderful that the Aztec priesthood could preserve and hand down to us through the ages this cavern hymn, but it could no more be lost than could the Lord's prayer. This hymn of the Aztec contains many passages, the meaning of which their priests had lost ages before America was discovered, just as our learned theologans for more than four thousand years have not understood many passages in Job and Genesis.

These legends, traditions, histories of every tribe, race, nation, point to a great and important event, a cataclysm by which the human race was almost destroyed, and this cataclysm was followed by an immense period of darkness, then a great cloud and then the light returned to the earth.

The traditions of cave life always accompany those in reference to a great fire and all unerringly point to the comet as the cause.

Geological records prove that the surface rocks under the drift have been exposed to great heat, in many places from 50 to 100 feet deep, and this could come from no other cause than a comet striking the earth.

Our geologists contend that there was an age of thick clouds, of floods, snows, glacier ice, during which the waters of the seas were lowered, and no other cause than a comet could do all these wondrous works.

From whence came the drift and the gravel and the clays? They are not in places to which nature would carry them unless we admit that a great comet struck the earth and deposited its water, its mineral clays, its gravel and that which we now call the drift.

There is no harmony in the geological record unless we admit that materials in great bulk came from outer space. The rising and falling of the seas, hundreds of feet and suddenly, cannot be denied nor can such be accounted for except by accessions from without, such as might have belonged to our moon when it was a comet.

Among the famous women who were mothers of small families comes Elizabeth Barrett Browning, who had only one son. Mrs. Sommerville, the mathematician, had two daughters and one son only, though she was twice married. Mme. George Sands had two children, a son and a daughter; so had Lady Mary Montagu, whose "letters" are so admired in our own literature, and Mme. de Sevigne, writer of equall famous "letters" in French. Mme. de Stael had three children in her early married life; when 48 years old she married a second time and then had another son. George Eliot (Mrs. Cross) was childless, and so was Mrs. Craik, the author of "John Halifax." Mrs. Barbauld, whose prose and poetry were both much admired in the last century, had no children, and the same was the case with her equally praised contemporary, Mrs. Opie.

THE BEE HIVE CLUB

The Other Side of the Corporal Punishment Question

Discussed By Patience, Prim and Silent Philosopher.

Woman and Her Ways—A Bit of Chat—The Domestic Corner—An Original Poem.

LOVE VERSUS FRIENDSHIP.

We read Byron and Browning together
And talked of—well God only knows,
Of everything down, from the weather,
To the latest new novel of Roe's.

She was winsome and youthful, with plenty
Of learning behind it, while I,
Well, I, was a fresh youth of 20,
So angular, awkward and shy.

Our friendship platonic was purely,
Aught else would be simply absurd,
In the soft faith we rested securely,
And never by look, or by word

Evinced aught that brother and sister
Mightn't show for each other i knew.
If sometimes, at parting, I kissed her
'Twas but what a brother should do.

And I felt, with her soft arms entwining
My neck, as together we sat,
Side by side. It was useless declining
A sister's just right to do that.

So we wandered among the romances,
That hope loves to conjure for youth.
Care lived, but in old women's fancies
And love was the essence of truth.

And friendship was life's strongest cable.
And yet—ah, 'tis her gentle tread.
Come, sit here and tell me, my Mabel,
If we spoiled our romance when we wed.

JAOK.

SINCE SHE WENT HOME.

Since she went home—
The evening shadows linger longer here,
The winter days fill so much of the year,
And even summer winds are chill and drear,
Since she went home.

Since she went home—
The robin's note has touched a minor strain.
The old, glad songs breathe but a sad refrain,
And laughter sobs with hidden, bitter pain,
Since she went home.

Since she went home—
How still the empty rooms her presence blessed!
Untouched the pillow that her dear head pressed,
My lonely heart hath nowhere for the rest,
Since she went home.

Since she went home—
The long, long days have crept away like years,
The sunlight has been dimmed with doubts and fears,
And the dark nights have been rained in lonely tears,
Since she went home.

WOMAN AND HER WAYS.

Every fair-minded man must acknowledge that for the same quantity and quality of work a woman should be paid as well as a man. Sometimes she is, though more frequently she is not, and perhaps there is no injustice under which she is more restive. Cannot women themselves do something to correct this inequality? Are they altogether free from its responsibility? How would it do for such as may have a liberal allowance or means of their own to volunteer a substantial increase of pay to the tired seamstress who sews from house to house? Does a woman give musical instruction to their children? If so, why do they pay, or consent to her being paid, only half of what a man would receive for the same service? It would be interesting to know whether the women who so eloquently and with some bitterness denounce this inequality, insist on paying their dressmakers as liberally as they would be compelled to pay a man for a tailor-made gown.—Syracuse Standard.

It is more than likely that these very women, without realizing that they are hypocritical, or, at least, inconsistent, get their plain sewing done at starvation prices, and pay fabulous sums to men for their tailor-made dresses.

The woman who does not do it is the exception rather than the rule.

Now this is no tirade against woman. If it was desired to make one, this—her own particular corner—would hardly be the place for it.

And it is admitted that there are exceptions.

We could all name dozens of large-hearted women who give their work to the needy, and pay living wages for it.

But the shameful fact remains that there are thousands calling in thunder tones for the equality of women, in voice, and vote, and salary, who never think to economize except on their plain sewing or dressmaking bills.

The cause may be thoughtlessness, but it looks very much like heartlessness.

While Mrs. Lease was gallivanting over the country making speeches and getting nothing for her pains, Ella Knowles was quietly electioneering for herself in Montana and now she is to have the good fat office of attorney-general of the state as her reward. That is the difference between hysterical and practical "reform".—Exchange.

This clipping is taken from a paper generally very just to woman and her rights.

The inference to be drawn from it is, that there are women, and women, and ways and ways, of doing things.

The mannish woman is a freak of nature and does more harm than good to any cause she espouses.

It isn't necessary to stalk around with an independent swagger any more than it is to crawl around with a senseless whine, in order to proclaim your rights or sue for privileges.

There is a happy medium, a womanliness, that is neither bold nor cringing, and that many women are in attune with it can be credited woman's advancement in the past decade.

I am not by any means sure that Mrs. Lease is hysterical.

She only adopted the fashion of the old parties in indulging in rather abusive language, but perhaps she would have made as many friends for her party had she taken higher ground

However, this isn't a criticism of Mrs. Lease or her methods, only—to repeat—there are ways and ways, and it seems as though woman's should be womanly.

A London dispatch says: Over ten thousand young women have signed an agreement to adopt a short skirt for walking in muddy or snowy weather during the coming winter.

At a conference of representatives of these dress reformers it was decided, after considerable debate, that the skirt should be at least five inches off the ground, or reaching only to the tops of the shoes.

The movement has spread to Nottingham, and it is thought that before many weeks boot-topped skirts will be the rage all over the country, except among that portion of the community that is unfortunate enough to possess pedal extremities of abnormal size.

Now, what woman outside of Chicago is going to rest under the insinuation that she wears trailing skirts to conceal her mammoth feet?

If any better or more logical argument was needed to induce women to shorten their skirts, here it is, and I predict that it will have more weight with more women than any that have yet been offered.

Big feet, indeed!

DORRIS DARE.

A WORD FOR THE ABUSED TEACHER.

Corporal punishment is the subject for discussion, it seems, and as the question has been led off with much vim, and the lady wishes to be distinctly understood as in favor of flogging, I would partially agree with her, yet the subjects to receive it, based on an opinion formed after much experience as a teacher, leads me to arrive at the conclusion that the parents of said offenders are many times the ones who should be tied to the terrible post, rather than the too often misjudged teacher.

It does not take a teacher very long to discover whom of their pupils are taught at home to be mannerly and obedient, and of this class they've never any reason to complain; but on the other hand at the present day, there are many parents who never seem to understand or appreciate the great responsibility resting on them as parents, the duties of their high calling as such, are sadly neglected, and their children at an early age seem to lose all respect for them, or fear of their authority; these same at home unruly children, are sent to school to upset the quiet and order which otherwise would prevail there, and then because the teacher cannot do what the parents themselves have failed in, (govern them by mild means) why then what an uproar; the teacher is a beast or worse.

"Consistency thou art a jewel!"

Some one has said that if we wish to have good children, we should begin on the parents twenty years ere the children are born.

I'm sorry the lady seems to have such a special antipathy toward a class of people who have chosen next to the highest calling on earth, all because a few out of thousands of excellent character, have perhaps failed to reach a high standard in government.

Do people ever fail in other vocations?

Did you ever read Chas. Reade's "Put Yourself in His Place?" Perhaps after trying the management of fifty or sixty pupils a few terms, you would be less bitter in regard to other people's failures.

But now do not mistake me to mean that I believe in child-beating, something which very few teachers do; but I do affirm that there are times when a judicious using of the switch is beneficial; mind you I say judicious.

Children are not all angels, if they were we would have less of the old spirit of Adam and Eve about us as we grow older.

PATIENCE PRIM.

SENSIBLE ADVICE

Of Silent Philosopher—"Lick 'Em If They Need It."

Here I come tootin' my horn.
Get out of the way, everybody.
What do I think of brat-beatin'?
Why, lick us; lick us.
If we want lickin', lick us.
Punishin' helps a feller. It helped me.
I kept teasin' a much bigger boy.
Friendly advice, warnin' words were in vain.
I teased and teased him.
He bore my pesterin' patiently a while, then flew mad,
Sich a lickin' as I got. It beat the public school teachers.
Their punishin' is pleasure compared to the goin' over I got from that big boy. I called him a name.
The next instant the floor, my size and darkness fell fast friends, with daylight knocked dizzy in two black eyes.
When it began dawnin' on me, attemptin' to rise, I met that feller's fist firin' stars in my face.
That lifted me. I saw the wall paper exchangin' spots for stripes, the room colorin' blue and the furniture dancin' a cotillion.
Another fist firin' stars and my size waltzed outside, leavin' that big bully without any partner.
Now I leave everybody alone.
Wouldn't call another feller a name for nothin'.
Lickin' made me a better boy.
Am glad Rachel Ray don't believe in liars.
That encourages me.
Now, sometime I'll pick up spunk to tell that big bully the truth.
If he resents it I may pound him.
Poundin' is good for several things.
It improves saur kraut to pound it.
Bad boys work worse than saur kraut.
They want something weighty to settle them down and subdue their spirits.
No feather weight can do it.
It takes a stone or a brick.
Then I think some beatin' must be done.
Our hearts beat, so do blacksmith's hammers; numerous boarders beat their landlords, beats flourish in gardens and some people swoller beets.
Only light is lickin' to see which brat beatin' improves.
Can Rachel send a ray?

SILENT PHILOSOPHER.

A COLUMN OF CHATS.

The pretty Thanksgiving poem printed in last Wednesday's Bee was written by a Club member, and intended for this Corner, but as we did not have a meeting before Thanksgiving it was thought best to print it elsewhere.

* * * *

Does Thanksgiving mean something more than roast turkey, cranberry sauce and pumpkin pie?

That it is gaining a truer and better significance each year is evidenced by the numberless deeds of kindness and charity, and the sacrifices made, until it would seem that the popular mode of giving thanks is that of making others thankful.

And that such a spirit exists amid all the sordid cares with which most of us are burdened, is enough in itself to make the pessimist hang his head in shame.

What right has anyone to assert that the world is growing worse, when evidence of that greatest of all virtues, charity, is visible on every hand?

* * * *

Considering what a busy week this has been, the members have done nobly in responding to call for discussion of the corporal punishment question.

By the way, Patience Prim can generally be depended on to have "views" on every subject of public interest, to express her sentiments clearly and make a good plea for "her side."

But perhaps the most telling argument is made by Silent Philosopher in his dialect speech, "Lick 'em if they need it."

He shows pretty plainly that he needed it, and that the bitter dose he received proved very beneficial.

And the Philisopher, being a boy himself, may be said to know boys pretty well.

Both letters prove conclusively that corporal punishment is necessary.

Now, let some one come in with some equally good ones to prove that it isn't, just to make the discussion interesting, and the more we hear of both sides the better able we shall be to decide on the proper thing to do.

There are always two sides to everything, and generally each can make a plausible argument, and only continued discussion will disclose the flaws.

If you have never written for the Club, begin now.

If you haven't anything to say on the corporal punishment question, write about anything else that interests you.

It will be of interest to others.

Several of the recipes this week are contributed by the good cooks of the Club, and are consequently all that they are claimed to be.

If the members only knew how these contributions are appreciated, not only by the chairman, but by every reader, there would be more recipes and suggestions for dainty dishes sent to this Corner.

Of course the holiday season is a busy one for all housewives, but it only takes a moment to jot down the ingredients of a dish with which you are pleased, and it is always a pleasure to share any little household secret of this kind with our friends.

Sweet Potato Puffs.

Steam six sweet potatoes; peel and mash fine; add one tablespoon of white sugar, two spoons of butter and a little salt; beat until light; grease your custard cups and fill them nearly full, brush the top with the white of an egg and bake in a quick oven. Serve hot for breakfast or dinner.—Mrs. B.

Graham Pudding.

One cupful of molasses, one cupful of sour milk, one egg, a teaspoonful of soda, a large cupful of washed English currants, and graham flour to stir quite stiff. Pour into a greased dish and steam three hours. Serve hot with sweetened cream seasoned with nutmeg.—Housekeeper.

Cornmeal Muffins.

Two eggs, a tablespoonful of lard, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt, two cups of flour, three of meal, and milk and water enough to make the mixture of the consistency of cake batter. Cook in gem pans and serve hot.—Cook.

Rice and Apple Pudding.

Pick over and wash a teacup of best rice. Steam it until tender, in two cups of cold water; spread it over a quart or three pints of good, ripe apples, quartered; pour over one or two cups of milk, if preferred, or omit the milk and add a little water to the apples. Half a cup of white sugar may be sprinkled over the apples, or sugar may be added at the table, if preferred. To an unperverted appetite this dish will be relished without the sugar, or, indeed, without the milk, if carefully baked and if rich apples are used.

Cinnamon Rolls.

One pint of sweet milk, one cup of melted butter, one teaspoon of salt, one-half cup of yeast, two quarts of flour; let stand over night; in the morning add two eggs and one-half cup of sugar; roll out, cut in shape and sprinkle with a little butter, sugar and cinnamon; let stand one hour before baking.

Cup Cake.

One cup of sugar, three-quarters of a cup of water, one-quarter of a cup of butter, two and one-half cups of flour, three eggs, two teaspoons of baking powder. Beat butter and sugar together, add yolks of eggs and beat well; add water, flour and baking powder, last the beaten whites of the eggs. Bake in a moderate oven.

Ginger Snaps.

One cup of brown sugar, one-half cup of butter, one-half cup of lard, one cup of molasses, one tablespoonful each of cinnamon, ginger, cloves and baking powder, one-half cup of water; flour enough to make a stiff dough; roll them out into round cakes and bake quickly.

Clove Cake.

Two cupfuls of flour, one-half cupful of molasses, one-half cupful of butter, one-half cupful of milk, two eggs, two cupfuls or more of raisins, one teaspoonful of soda, one-half teaspoonful each of cloves, cinnamon, and allspice, and one-half teaspoonful of nutmeg.

Boston Brown Bread.

Three cups of graham flour, two cups of cornmeal, one-half cupful of molasses, one pint of sour milk and one pint of water, one teaspoonful soda, one teaspoonful salt. Put in a tin pail covered tightly, and boil four hours in a kettle.—M. R. H.

Stuffing.

One cup cracker crumbs, one-fourth cup melted butter, one saltspoonful salt, one saltspoonful pepper, one teaspoonful chopped onion, one teaspoonful chopped parsley, one teaspoonful chopped pickles and one teaspoonful chopped capers.

In serving the fish garnish with much parsley entirely covering the tail and head. Add slices of lemon.

The Hollandaise sauce may be poured around it or served separately in a bowl. It amounts to more if served in a bowl.

Run a knife along the back of the fish and the pieces will come right off on either side. The bone is not cut through so it is easy for the carver.

THE SCRAP BASKET.

Purple Asters.

O, purple stars that shine below
As night's stars shine above,
How plainly does your beauty show
To us that "God is Love."

For in the wild flowers most I see
The tokens of His care;
The "gospel of the fields" to me
Comes through them everywhere.

—Margaret May.

"There is a dignity in all poverty which makes itself entirely independent of the wealth of others; and which is unwilling, even though pressed, to share it.

Fight It Out.

Yet a little while,
Yet a little way,
We shall reap and rest and smile,
All the day.
Up! let's trudge another mile!

—Rosabel.

Kindness in woman, not their beauteous looks, shall win my love.—Shakespeare.

Mother—"Why aren't you and Georgie as good boys as your little brother?" Young Hopeful—"I guess it's 'cause you'd had more experience bringin' up boys w'en you commenced on him."—Good News.

What is a successful life?
It is that life which has enjoyed the most, given in the largest degree, imparted health, strength and happiness to others and received the largest influx from divine sources.

The Difference.

"Plaze let me have me wages, sir,
Ye know they're due to-day,"
So sez the master of the house
The buxom cook did say.
"Why, certainly, and here they are;
And Bridget, by the way,
Those buckwheat cakes were quite the best
I've had in many a day."

* * * *

"Please let me have a dollar, George
Before you go down town."
The husband snarled a little snarl
And frowned a little frown;
"Money again? Good gracious!
You never keep a cent.
You had a dollar Tuesday night—
I don't see where it went."

HOME DECORATION.

Do not put away the torchlet
That you carried for your man;
You can use it in your household,
O, at least, your dear wife can.
Take and paint the stick bright golden,
Nail it where you do not tramp,
Throw a shade of tissue paper;
See? You have a parlor lamp.

You Needn't Look immediately for the damage that dangerous washing compounds do. It's there, and it's going on all the time, but you won't see its effects, probably, for several months. It wouldn't do, you know, to have them too dangerous.

The best way is to take no risk. You needn't worry about damage to your clothes, if you keep to the original washing compound—Pearline; first made and fully proved. What can you gain by using the imitations of it? Prize packages, cheaper prices, or whatever may by urged for them, wouldn't pay you for one ruined garment.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled; if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 346 JAMES PYLE, New York.

SAMANTHA JONES' CONVERSION TO CORPORAL PUNISHMENT.

Household Editor:

The eloquence of that Lord Chesterfield who writes under the nom de plume of "Stroller" in the Sunday Journal, and who enticingly pictures the beatitudes of rawhiding public school schildren, has converted me, Samantha Jones. I used to be one of those fool women who opposed the use of loaded raw hides, rulers, etc., in our public schools. But resistance to Mr. Stroller's logic is no longer possible, following as it does in the wake of humane arguments of such prominent philanthropists as the president of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty, and noted authority on prison reform. I, Samantha Jones, now comprehend the beatific results of raw hiding and my small head grows dizzy with wonderment that anybody ever could have thought the raw hide anything but an unmitigated blessing as an instrument of restraint in our public schools.

According to this authority flogging galore represents the highest type of enlightenment. Admitting that this is so, if a little is good, practiced upon school children, why would not a great deal more be better for the entire body social? And ought we not to have a plenty of it? Ought not the whipping post to be restored in its pristine usefulness and all wife beaters, drunkards, gay Lotharios, thieves, evil doers and even real bad editor men be restored to virtue by its use. Flogging might be introduced in courtship, too, a la William the Conqueror, who, when Matilda of Flanders gave him the mitten, beat her black and blue with a horsewhip, and she loved him so for it, she married him instanter, and never gave him any trouble afterwards.

Surely, the man who had a thousand wives, and a large family in consequence, knew what he was about when he advocated the idea that to spare the rod spoils the child. He raised very many bad children, but what of that? Does not the principle remain even if the experiment fails? And then we might inaugurate the knout, that excellent disciplinarian may not be as black as fool sentimental humanitarians represent. It might prove a blessing to some refractory, full-grown children. Yes, indeed, Madame Editor, the discipline of the good old times was truly heroic, not such wishy washy, namby pamby stuff as corporal punishment opponents would ruin the world with now. When the rack, the thumbscrew, the ducking stool, the iron collar, etc., were in fashion school children never dared to say to their teacher "Come down from your perch."

Yours respectfully,
SAMANTHA JONES.

Raw Hide Town, Nov. 26, 1892.

WHEN HIS WIFE IS GONE AWAY.

He repairs his tattered garments and he puts his laundry out,
Sews on buttons, hunts his slippers, scatters everything about;
Tears the curtains from the windows, vainly tries to put them back;
Tilts a cabinet, in falling wrecks some treasured bric-a-brac;
Goes to bed a shade ill-humored and sometimes forgets to pray—
Oh! his days are full of trouble when his wife is gone away.

He resumes his youthful habits, lingers with the boys till late,
Sings the charms of winsome women, dresses like a fashion plate;
Aye, he shaves himself tri-weekly and his patent leathers shine,
While his neckwear is a study in both color and design;
And he wears the whitest linen and a button-hole bouquet—
Oh! he's mighty fine and tidy when his wife is gone away.

He attends each fete and picnic in a radius of ten miles;
Is the very incarnation of politeness wreathed in smiles;
And the girls declare him charming—just too nice for anything;
For he treats them to choice confections and he takes them in the swing.
As a bachelor he poses, and he woos the ladies gay—
Oh! he does a sight of meanness when his wife is gone away.

But when daylight fades to twilight and the lonely night winds sigh,
And the glory of the evening stars is showered from the sky;
When the stillness hovers round him like the holy hour of prayer,
With no sound but unseen pinions pulsing thro' the slumb'rous air,
Then her presence rules his bosom with the old angelic sway,
And he knows her worth and sweetness when his wife is gone away.

Yes, she stands before him smiling, guardian spirit of the night,
With a voice so full of music and with face so warm and bright;
And his heart grows softer and tender, as come thronging to his mind
All her deeds of love and duty, all her helpful words and kind;
And her imperfections vanish as the shadows of the day,
And he loves her, oh, how dearly! when his wife is gone away.

THE CHILDREN'S HOUR

A Thanksgiving Story By Cousin Jack.

Puzzles and Poetry and a Short Original Sketch By Eddie Moore.

WHO LIKES THE RAIN?

"I," said the duck, "I call it fun,
For I have my little red rubbers on;
They make a cunning three-toed track
In the soft, cool mud. Quack! Quack!"

"I," cried the dandelion, "I
My roots are thirsty, my buds are dry;"
And she lifted her little yellow head
Out of her green grassy bed.

"I hope 'twill pour! I hope 'twill pour!"
Croaked the tree toad at his gray back door,
"For with a broad leaf for a roof,
I am perfectly weatherproof."

Sang the brook, "I laugh at every drop,
And wish they never need to stop
Till a big river I grew to be,
And could find my way to the sea."
—Banner.

AT THE BABY'S BEDTIME

This is baby's bedtime;
My little one comes to me
In her snowy little night-gown,
And kneels down at my knee;
And I fancy a sweet child-angel
Is for a time my guest,
As she says her little prayers over,
With her hands upon her breast.

"Now I lay me," she whispers
In low voice, "down to sleep;
I pray the Lord"—and the blue eyes
Half close—"my soul to keep.
If I should die"—Oh! the shiver
At my heart!—"before I wake
I pray the Lord"—and the eyelids
Droop low—"my soul to take."

HELEN'S THANKSGIVING.

Helen had cried nearly all day; here she was laid up with a sprained ankle, not able to get off the couch, only to think over the fun she would miss on the morrow, which would be Thanksgiving day.

Such great preparations as were going on in the kitchen. Cook, she knew, was making delicious pies out of bg yellow pumpkins; spicy cakes and flakey tarts she could almost see, standing in a prim row on the pantry shelves, waiting for the coming feast. The whole house was redolent with fragrant odors. Sad-hearted little Helen thought impatiently.

I wish there were fairies now as there used to be in Cinderella's days, and that they would cure my ankle and carry me away off to see all the merry makings."

She closed her eyes a moment to keep back the tears, when a funny, cheery voice, right at her elbow, said:

"Well, why shouldn't there be? There is your fairy godmother, and I love you so dearly. I will grant your wish my child."

Helen was so frightened at first she didn't know what to say; but was there ever a little girl who wouldn't ask for something, especially when a fairy gave the gift.

"I'd like to take a ride Thanksgiving eve and see the home of your people," replied Helen in a very weak, small voice, her courage returning as she saw there was nothing to fear. The fairy tapped on the floor once, with a long, slender staff, and if the door didn't fly open and in rolled a shining, jolly pumpkin.

"Stop," spoke the fairy, lightly touching its glowing surface, when to Helen's astonishment it burst asunder, throwing out the golden seeds, which rolling over and over, changed into cooing doves. The godmother, with her wand, again struck the laughing face of the pumpkin, when, strange to tell, wheels appeared on the sides, the top seemed to roll up, and while in delight she gazed it became a beautiful coach. The doves harnessed themselves at a nod from the fairy. Helen stepped in, the doves spread their wings and aloft they went through the window.

Helen looked back expecting to behold a pile of broken glass, but the window sash was down, and everything was just as before, but she hadn't time to do much worrying for the wonderful sights to be seen.

Over the tree tops, close to the moon, among the stars, through the silvery lighted clouds, rode Helen, in the odd coach. After a while they descended to the banks of a babbling brook, across this flew the doves, then swiftly on they went into a dark, gruesome forest, but which became lighter and brighter as they advanced farther into it, until the round eyes of Helen grew even rounder, if that were possible, trying to see all the astonishing things in this new world. Here and there dim little figures were flitting busily about and all going in the same direction. No one noticed Helen, and perhaps they failed to see her, as she was not one of themselves. The whole forest was musical with the gay chatter of these fairy spirits, the chirp of an awakened bird, and the song of the brook as its waters lapped the shores of fairy land; faint, sweet music, that sounded more entrancing as she emerged upon a moonlighted glade, in the middle of which stood an airy snowy crystal palace, so fair and frail that the delicate texture of a spider's web was not so fine. Numerous steps led to the entrance of this magical edifice. Helen's carriers softly alighted, the doors noiselessly parted to admit her; two wee elfs advanced from somewhere and preceded the enchanted little maiden of earth through beautiful rooms and lofty halls, where sparkling fountains played and the air was burdened with the breath of flowers. At last the guides passed before a waving cloud-like drapery, gently raised it, and a brilliant, glittering throng burst on her view. Here was the king of the fairy kingdom, seated in great state on an emerald throne, around him grouped his court. The king was the least mite of a man, with a voice like a flute, so clear and shrill. His majesty was just addressing his courtiers when Helen's entrance caused everybody to look at her.

"Here she comes," said the king in his flute-like tones.

"Here she comes," piped the court.

"Who?" said Helen, getting right brave.

"Our queen," all answered.

"Where is she? Do tell me," excitedly exclaimed Helen.

The fairy godmother taking Helen's hand, who was now so dazzled and overcome by all this ceremony that she felt too shy to move or speak, only she heard the godmother say:

"Why, don't you know? You're the queen."

The king gracefully descended from his seat and led Helen up the steps, seated her in a chair like his own, placed a glittering crown upon her head.

This was the signal for the fairies, and the forest echoed with the tidings of the queen's arrival, and their welcome as they sang:

"Merrie little sprites are we,
Welcome now we give to thee.
Sweet your face, your eyes so true,
Loyally the fairies bow down to you."

At the end of this melody all saluted her.

Helen had never seen such a pretty picture. Many hundreds were there arrayed in doublet and hose, made of all colors. Some in the scarlet leaf of an autumn dress, the crimson of the maple, the green of the oak, others dainty in the yellow, white, pink or various hues of the chrysanthemum. Helen rubbed her eyes. Was she asleep? No, wide awake, and at her side stood the godmother, who whispered:

"Why don't you invite them to dance? That's what they are waiting for."

Helen, or rather the queen said with quite a royal air: "On with the dance, lords and ladies."

The king in a majestic manner arose, raised his hand, and immediately there began the swift, wild dancing of the fairy subjects. Four crippled elderly gentlemen made sweet music, the trees swayed in unison, the nightingale sang, the frogs croaked hoarsely in the brook, while the gay dancers kept singing:

Dance away, dance away,
While is played a roundelay;
Dance away, dance away,
Fill the night with melody.

The musicians ceased, the king haughtily drew himself up to his full height, which wasn't much, bent one knee in the old-time cavalier style before Helen, and asked the honor of her hand for the royal minuet. Taking his hand, she found herself flying over the velvet turf. She didn't know her feet were so light, and thinking of them reminded her of the sprained ankle, and looking down at her old shoes, which must be clumsy in this place, what was her amazement to behold herself gowned in white. Dear little shoes, fastened with silver buckles, were peeping out from under her frock; she laughed outright, it was so comical to think all her old clothes had disappeared and she had never noticed the change. She wondered what her mamma would say, and who had her dress and shoes, and—here she was brought back to the fairy land by Salute Your Partners.

How queer she felt—it was just like "Alice in Wonderland," and queerer yet, every time in swinging at the corners that she touched a fairy's hand, up they grew, taller and taller, until she dropped their hands, and then they commenced to get smaller and smaller, till they were on a level with her eyes. Thus she could see what the rest were doing. Of course 'twas very amusing to the others, though the dance had to be delayed until they were made small enough to continue it If it hadn't been for this provoking delay he would have enjoyed it immensely, but sometimes the musicians did get a trifle ruffled, even though it was the queen; being old they were privileged to grumble, for in this land nobody dared speak crossly to old people. Finally the king gave the summons, and all followed him to the banquet, where the guests sat down to a magnificent supper, spread with the rarest viands luscious grapes, delicious creams, flowers in profusion, everything most lavish. In the middle of the table, what was it that reposed on the spotless damask, but a placid pumpkin, in solemn content, looking to Helen suspiciously like the identical one out of which she had tripped but a short time before. Indeed, it took away her appetite, lying there as if to keep a watchful eye on her, that the polite manners her mamma had taught were not forgotten.

When Helen attempted to speak, her voice sounded so far away nobody listened, which certainly wasn't nice. Poor Helen's feelings were quite hurt, but, being a good-hearted child, she thought maybe they didn't hear her, which was true.

Away off there was something said about "little girls and Thanksgiving Day. Helen pricked up her ears. What was this—"I am seeking a girl by name Helen, who is always wishing for impossible things, and who is missing from her own home this day."

Helen trembled down to her buckled shoes. She wondered what was going to be done to her. The king and the banqueters scowled darkly at the intruder, an ugly looking ogre, who glared at everyone, as though he'd like to devour them. At length the silence was broken by Helen's godmother remarking that it was near Thanksgiving dawn, and nobody should cherish anything but the kindest feelings towards the child queen, who used to be a little maid called Helen. She continued: "We must drink her health in a bumper of crystal water."

At this the hour of midnight was intoned by a chime of bells, and the godmother whispered:

Make haste, or you'll forever be a fairy.

Helen jumped so hastily that the chair was upset with a crash, the pumpkin on the table laughed so much it split its sides; out flew the doves, into the pumpkin coach again sprang Helen, and away they went. All the fairy throng hastened to catch their flying queen, and succeeded in tearing off the precious crown, which gave her head such a jerk that she cried out:

"Oh, let me go; let me go," and fainted with fright, knowing no more until the godmother left her in her own warm little bed.

"Let me go, let me go," again cried Helen, as she became conscious.

"Let who go?" asked her brother Ed just then coming into the room. For some minutes Helen didn't know where she was or who she was. There was brother Ed standing near her, giving her a brotherly shake and laughing heartily as he said: "Wake up; who is after you? Was it the turkey?"

Helen wouldn't tell anybody where she had been until mamma kissed her little daughter good-night, then she related her wonderful journey to fairyland.

Mamma said she dreamed it all, but Helen shook her sleepy head, and knew better. Now, what do you think?

Helen has spent several Thanksgivings since, but has never enjoyed any so much as that one, nor has she ever forgotten that night in Elfinland, and is not yet certain but that it really was true.

COUSIN JACK.

MISTAKES OF A SMALL BOY.

A boy would not be worth much if he never made mistakes and was never told of them. There is hope for a boy in proportion to the number of mistakes he makes and afterwards corrects. One of the most common mistakes of a boy is in what he wants. He is apt to want most the things he hasn't, and one of the things a small boy hasn't and hankers after most of all things is size. O, how he does pine for size! He waits and counts days and scratches the wall with pencil-marks, and stretches himself up trying to catch up with his big brother. And all the time he may be more of a man than his big brother if only he would put the right kind of a measure in place of the foot rule.

You have heard of the Irishman who went to the market to buy the most for his money, and finding that turnips were so much cheaper than potatoes, bought four bushels of turnips instead of two of potatoes. But he was very much surprised to learn that the turnips were 75 per cent. water, and that he might have bought a package he could have carried in his vest pocket that would have contained the same amount of nutriment as his four bushels of turnips.

That was a case where size was deceiving, and that is why the small boy is often taken in. Its not the size of a man's fist, or the breadth of his shoulders, or the height of his stove pipe hat that counts. I have seen a seven-foot bully do a thing so mean and unmanly that a seven-year-old boy ought to blush for it. And I have seen a boy pass along after him and pick the whining dog up that he had lamed by a kick, and treat it with such pity and tenderness that, if we still lived in the days of chivalry (and we do in more ways than one), that boy would have been knighted and spurred and received the applause and smiles of fair ladies and noble men and his king and the hulking giant would have been given to some magician to be changed into a flea or a potato-bug, or some petty, noxious insect. If a boy would only hanker after the things that ought to go with size, and let size take care of itself, he would make no mistake.

Another thing the small boy is apt to overrate is physical strength. He is always bragging about what he can do, and the strongest boy in the crowd is sure to have things pretty much his own way. The whole world used to be boys once in that respect. The man who could strike the hardest blow and ride the fastest and jump the farthest and use his arms and legs the best was the best man; now it is the man who can use his head the best. It is the man who has the best heart. The Indian said when he first heard a pistol fired and saw the deadly effects, "He heap little, heap loud, heap go quick and hit hard." A boy who is little need not be loud, but if he can go quick and hit the mark clean through in doing his duty he is manlier than some who wear men's clothing. It is not the exhibition of strength; it is the just and kind use of strength, the intelligent and judicious use of strength, that makes great. The horse has more strength than the man but the man with his less strength and his superior mind makes the horse go as he pleases and subdues the wildest and most ferocious beast.

Don't ache for size; don't ache for strength. Don't lie awake nights thinking how to get either. Let those things take care of themselves and be just the kindest, most truthful, patient, industrious, merriest, happiest boy you can, and get all the love you can from others, and give all the love you can to them, and men will one day say of you "What a power he is!" and maybe you couldn't lift a five-pound dumb-bell. But all I say will be true nevertheless.—Our Morning Guide.

"NOTS" IN UNITED STATES HISTORY.

From Mr. Malcolm Townsend's unique collection of facts regarding the history and composition of the United States, and to which he has given the comprehensive title "U. S.," we glean the following curios:

The Dismal swamp is not a swamp, neither is it dismal nor unhealthy. It is a beautiful stretch of pure water, and, "the healthiest place on the American continent."

The East river, flowing between New York and Brooklyn, is not a river, but a sea strait connecting Long Island sound and the ocean.

Manhattan is not the Indian name of New York island, but is directly traceable to a Spanish origin—monas, "drunkenness;" monadus, manadus, manatoes, "the place of drunkenness." Manhattan is but the Indian form of the word.

The Declaration of Independence was not signed on July 4 by the representatives whose names have become historic. It was given to the world on Monday, the 8th of July, 1776, with but two signatures: John Hancock, president of the congress, and Charles Tomson, secretary. The signatures of 45 delegates were affixed to a copy of the original paper on Tuesday, the 2d of August, 1776.

There was not a bearded face among all the signers of the declaration. "All the signers," says the Record, "had smooth faces."

The word "God" does not appear in the constitution of the United States, nor is there any reference to creed or church beliefs.

Three delegates to the convention would not sign the constitution. These were: Eldridge Gerry, of Massachusetts; George Mason and Edward J. Randolph, of Virginia. Gerry feared a civil war, Mason a monarchy, and Randolph objected to the powers conferred on the president.

Benedict Arnold was not the first or only traitor during the revolution. His predecessor in that "Judas" office was Dr. Benjamin Church, of Raynham, Mass., arrested, tried and imprisoned at Cambridge, Mass., in 1775. He had been an active member of the Provincial congress and was trusted as an ardent patriot. He was released from prison in 1776 because of failing health, embarked for the West Indies, and he and the vessel in which he sailed were never afterward heard of.

The following states have not a state motto: Indiana, Mississippi, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Carolina, Ohio and Texas.

The dollar sign ($) is not a monogram of "U. S." but dates from the days when the transfer was made from Spanish to American dollars, and accounts were kept equally in dollars and reals. Thus: One dollar || eight reals (American and Spanish parallel accounts). Later the eight was placed between the cancellation marks |8|, then the perpendicular line crossed the 8, and finally the 8 shaded into an S, and combined with the cancellation line evolved the present sign ($).

The head of a man does not appear on any coin of the United States.

Eight states do not observe New Year's day as a holiday; seven states do not class Washington's birthday as a legal holiday.

Friday is not an "unlucky" day for the United States; at least forty great events in United States history fell on Friday.

The American Indian is not a "vanishing race." There is very nearly as large an Indian population in the United States to-day as at the time of Columbus.—Northwestern Advocate.

EDWARD AND HIS TWO DOGS.

Edward was a boy of ten years, and the names of his two dogs were Bruno and Jip. Bruno was a Scotch terrier and Jip was part bull and part shepherd. Bruno was a large dog for his kind, which is small anyhow. Edward has a small wagon to which he hitches up Bruno and Jip and goes to town. One day Edward hitched them up and started for town as usual. When about half way there the wagon got a hot-box in the front wheel. He had no grease and he knew no one, and he did not want to leave his wagon here, for some one might take it. So what was he to do? It got to be about 12 o'clock and the men were coming home from work. Tom was watching for his fa[illegible] but could not see him in any direction. Now some boys would have cried, but Tom knew that that would do no good, so he said to himself: "I will carry the wagon home on my shoulder," although it was a pretty heavy job for a small boy. They trudged along like this for a way, then Tom's burden grew tiresome. He found that he had some twine in his pocket, so he again hitched up Jip and Bruno, who dragged the wagon along regardless of the wheel which would not turn. Tom said that the next time he went out he would have a little oil-can filled with oil in case he should have an accident.

ED. N. MOORE.

BEHIND THE TIMES.

"What's that noise, I wonder?" whispered a frightened little Tulip deep down under the snow. "It must be the brook waking up from its winter nap. But it makes such a noise! I wish it would keep still and let me sleep." And the lazy flower never stirred from her brown bed.

After several weeks she felt a warm sunbeam's touch, and hurried to put her head above the ground.

"Good morning, Tulip," gayly nodded the Daffodil; "I have been waiting for you."

"Good morning," answered the Tulip, with a little shiver. "How did you manage to get up so early?"

"Well, it was not easy," laughed the Daffodil, "but I was bound to do it, for I could not bear to have all the people think that the spring herself was dead. They would have been so much disappointed if I had not come early to tell them about all the rest."

Tulip had nothing to say; she only closed her yellow petals and wished she had been more willing to think of others.—Harper's Young People.

BEE HIVE.

Greeting.

Dear Little Friends—How many of you are going to write something about Thanksgiving for the Bee Reading club. Cousin Jack has again favored us with a story about Helen's Thanksgiving dream. We enjoy his stories very much, do we not? Eddie Moore, aged 10, has written a short original story for this week. I wish you would all try to do the same, choosing your own subject. All manuscript must be in the Bee office before Thursday of each week if it is to appear the following Saturday night. Address "Aunt Maud," care Bee Reading Club, Bee Office, Toledo, O.

EXAMINATION
—OF—
LUCAS COUNTY TREASURY.

HON. I. I. MILLARD, Probate Judge, Lucas County, Ohio.

Under authority of the attached commission, and being duly sworn, the undersigned inspected the County Treasury, selecting September 26, 1892, as the date.

The examination was also attended by the Board of County Commissioners.

The following is a summary of the Treasury statement at the close of business on the evening of September 24:

TREASURY STATEMENT.

County Balance	$276,141 87
City Balance	501,636 47

Pennies	1 03	$ 58,679 03

We counted the cash in the hands of the Treasurer, and found the same to be in accordance with the statement.

The City and County Depositories, the First and Second National Banks, were visited and the deposit accounts certified to by the proper officials.

Statements of balances were obtained from the County and City Auditors, City Natural Gas Department, and from the Secretary of the Water Works Board, the two latter to compare with the City Auditor's books. The Auditors' balances are submitted with this report.

It is due the various officials connected with the examination to say they afforded the Examiners every opportunity for inspection and verification, and kindly aided in the work.

Respectfully submitted,

HENRY C. ELLIS,
WILLIAM BEATTY,
Examiners Lucas County Treasury.

HALF-WAY.

The years that steal our youth away
Come drifting on—come drifting on,
Like snowflakes that endure a day
And then are gone.

Upon the hearth is blazing bright
An open fire—I sit and dream,
And think how far into the night
And storm its ruddy glow doth stream.

And then, within my heart to-night
The flame of youth flares up once more,
To shed a gleam of flickering light
Through all the dark that lies before.

And all the lost come back once more,
And all the dead things live again,
And footsteps echo on the floor,
And faces press against the pane.

And now I try so hard to catch
A whisper from the forms that pass,
To touch the hand that lifts the latch—
The lips that tremble on the glass.

And seek to check the rising tears
For sweet dead joys and loved ones gone,
For memories that like the years
Come drifting on—come drifting on.

My fire burns low, but through the gloom
Comes stealing in the gray of dawn,
The shadows scurry from the moon
Till all are gone.

And morn is here—the storm is past;
The room is filled with ruddy day;
But on my head is drifting fast
The snow that never melts away.

—A. B. Paine, in Kate Field's Washington.

Farm and Garden

Manuring Grass Lands.

During the latter part of the fall and early winter is one of the best seasons for applying manure to grass lands. There are perhaps two advantages in this; one is that during the winter the rain and melting snow will aid materially to carry the soluble portions into the soil in a condition to be used by the growing plants, and the other is that the coarser or insoluble portions that remain on the surface will act as a mulch and help materially to prevent injury by thawing and freezing. It is often the case that both the meadows and pastures are cropped so close that the plants are injured very seriously by the thawing and freezing.

One of the best plans of manuring is by applying on the grass lands. Of course where this is done a regular system of rotation should be followed up. At the same time with good management and proper manuring land may be kept in grass for several years without a change.

With both meadows and pastures by keeping the soil rich a better growth can be secured, and this implies the keeping of more stock and the making of more manure.

If manure is applied early to grass, it will work down on the soil so that it will not interfere with the growth of the grass the next spring. However, if applied in large lumps some damage may be done to the plants by smothering them. By a little care in spreading, so that it will be scattered evenly over the surface, this may be avoided.

Of course care must be taken not to haul out when the soil is soft as considerable damage will be done in this way. But there will be plenty of opportunity hauling out manure during the winter onto the meadows and pastures, when no injury will be done by manuring and the soil be in good condition to derive the benefit from the application. The finer the manure, and the more evenly it is spread, the better will be the results secured.—N. J. Shepherd, in Farm, Field and Fireside.

Soil Moisture.

When ground is plowed in the spring and a stratum of soil four to six inches in depth is shaved completely from that below and reversed in a loose condition upon it, there is provided a covering which acts as a strong mulch. It has for a long time been believed by studious, observant farmers that this checks in a marked degree the loss of water by evaporation from the undisturbed soil.

Precise figures have been lacking, however, until recently the Pennsylvania experiment station made careful investigations. One plot was plowed April 28, 1892, and the soil was carefully tested in comparison with a similarly unplowed field, May 6. The unplowed ground contained in the upper four feet, 9.13 pounds less water per square foot than did the plowed ground, an equivalent of 1.75 inches of rainfall.

When it is observed that the amount of water available for crop production, on almost all lands, is less than that which can be used to the best advantage, when one year is taken with another, such a fact has an important bearing upon problems of tillage. It teaches that where corn and potato ground is to be plowed in the spring, the plowing should be done as the soil is dry enough to permit it, and that where corn is to be planted upon fall plowing, the disc harrow, or similar tool, should be used upon this ground as early as practicable, to avoid a needless loss of water by surface evaporation.

The prevention of excessive waste of soil water is not the only important gain which results from early spring tillage. With all clay soils and clayey loams there is a certain degree of dryness at which they work with the least resistance, and are at the same time in the best possible tilth; as these soils pass from the excessive wet stage through the stage of best moisture to that of too little, they shrink and draw together into the larger or smaller clods which are so annoying, so productive of labor and so preventive of large yields.

The ground referred to in the above experiment was plowed on April 28, was left in excellent tilth; but that which, side by side with it, laid eight days longer without plowing had developed in it during that time great numbers of clods of extreme size and excessive hardness, and as a consequence it became necessary to go over this ground twice with a loaded harrow, twice with a disc harrow, and twice with a heavy roller before it was brought into a condition of tilth only approximating that which it might have had had it been plowed on April 28. Not only did the delay in plowing increase four-fold the labor of fitting the ground, but at the same time it resulted in an unnecessary waste of water, which was really large and greatly needed.

We are fast coming to believe that surface tillage diminishes the rate of evaporation from the soil; but as yet we are without positive data in regard to just how great this saving may be. This question was also studied at the above station. It was found that during sixty-four days, for each column of soil one square foot in section and six feet long, the uncultivated ground had dried 8.84 pounds more than cultivated foot.

A saving of 8.84 pounds per square foot is equivalent to a rainfall of 1.7 inches; 301.49 pounds of water are required for a pound of dry matter in corn, and the above saving of water in times of shortage should increase the yield of dry matter per acre 1,277 pounds, which is about 14 per cent. of a good yield.

It should be observed that the retaining of water already in the ground, to the extent indicated above, must be much more serviceable to crops than to have an equivalent added to the surface in the form of rain, for in all such cases a very large portion of that especially in dry times, is returned at once to the air without passing through the crop.—Our Grange Homes.

The Stock to Keep.

Generally speaking, the profit in keeping an animal decreases or wholly disappears shortly after the prime of life is past. If kept long after this point is reached the profit that has accrued from feeding through the earlier stages may be lost. Farmers are not generally much given to sentiment in this matter, and do not retain animals after the period of profitable use is past, not from any special affection, but simply because they do not recognize the fact that they are on the down grade. Go into the barns and fields of men who are thoroughly successful stock raisers and you will find mainly young animals, very rarely any that are much past their prime. On the other hand, look over the stock of men who think that live stock does not pay, and you will often see the reason plainly written in the too great age to which the animals are kept.

The best time to sell an old or aging animal is direct from good pasture. If you cannot get it in good shape for market on grass you cannot do so with profit in any other way. To put it up and feed grain would cost more than you would gain, and very often an animal can be made moderately fat on grass that could hardly be fed up at all on grain and hay because of the impaired condition of both its teeth and digestive apparatus. Save your winter feed and winter care for young and thrifty stock that can pay you a good return, even if some of the old stand-bys have to be sold for canners' stock in the fall or for a little less than you think it is really worth. Keep nothing during the winter that does not show good earning power.—Farmer's Home.

How to Make Poultry Pay.

I am the wife of a farmer, who has felt the need of money which my husband could not supply, just as almost every other farmer's wife has felt that need. So I turned my attention to poultry raising as a remedy and have made it pay. I am situated just about as the average farmer's wife is, and have not all the conveniences and appliances which one would like to have for the business. In early March I started with a flock of 125 hens, five roosters and five ducks, one drake, two turkey hens and a gobbler. I determined to keep my own accounts, foot my own bills, if possible, and in short, see what I could do.

I agreed to pay my husband $25 for corn used from his crib, pay for what feed I would buy at the mill, buy the groceries, his tobacco, and anything we would need in the way of clothes (we have no children), or about the farm which we usually bought at country stores. We milked two cows and what butter I could sell was to help me, too, but that was very much, as we had hands to board. I also agreed to pay the hired girl ($1 a week) from what I made. I have done all I agreed to do up to this time, and have had money to buy many things in the way of dress and household articles, which otherwise I would not have had. Then I took a trip, too, and bore all my own expenses. I met one misfortune, but for which my pocket would have been considerably heavier. As an experiment, one morning I fed a mixture consisting of ground wheat, cockle and rye, and in consequence lost 100 young chicks, 35 hens and over 30 ducks. They could not digest it and most of them died in 24 hours.

The grown chickens were fed a warm bran mash in the morning, mixed with sour milk; also cooked potatoes, turnips, cabbage, pumpkins or anything of the kind which was on hand. Sometimes I take the best of the soap grease with which to season the mixture. I try to keep always in a trough for them. When the weather is cold it should be warmed and put in frequently, a little at a time. At noon I feed corn parched on the ear and at night corn boiled or raw. In summer they can get the fruit which falls from the trees; but in winter I throw out the specked apples and pumpkins, also onions and raw cabbage. I keep lime always where the fowls can get it and every morning pound up oyster shells for them. Little chickens should never be given raw dough. I bake corn bread with plenty of onions and pepper in it. Give them milk, dry bran to pick, onions and any small grain. My experience has been that eggs pay better than chickens, therefore, though I raise a good many early chickens, I never sell the pullets, but sell off the old birds (those over three years old) and keep the young. I buy at least one setting of thoroughbred eggs, as I think it pays to have good blood in the flock and new blood every year. All of my roosters are full blooded.

I consider brown Leghorns and Plymouth Rocks or Wyandots the best breeds for the farm.

The ducks paid, too. They did not stop laying till very late in the season, and when they did I began to pluck their feathers about every six weeks, which more than paid their board. They were fed, about as the chickens were. It is well to sell the eggs until they go down in price, then set them. Little ducks should be given plenty of water, but not allowed to run in wet grass. As to turkeys, I am sure they pay under ordinary circumstances. Both of my hens were accidentally killed after they had laid but a few eggs. I have four hens and a gobbler with which to begin business again, and I hope and expect to make them pay.—Mrs. R. G. Tyler, in Farm and Home.

Agricultural Notes from Farm Papers.

Work everything into the soil that will give it life or add to the supply of plant food.

It is folly to undertake more than can be done at the right time and in a proper manner.

A well-kept farm builds the farmer's fame as a well kept house adds to the reputation of the housekeper.

A crop that can not be made profitable when thoroughly tested under favorable conditions, should be abandoned.

When hay can be used on the farm to good advantage prices must be remarkably good if it can be sold off the farm advantageously.

If the tools are still in the field, hitch up the team and go for them at once—get them under cover if it is made by covering them deep in a straw pile.

An English writer has shown very clearly that this season prices of wheat have been lowered far more than other grain, in a comparison of the position now with a series of previous years.

The first step toward good roads in any neighborhood can be taken by draining off standing water from the sides. Next drain the road bed. Then pave or gravel as the circumstance will permit.

Now is a good time to clean up fence corners, clearing out stones, stumps or rubbish that prevent good grass or some other useful crop from growing there and being harvested at the proper time.

In sending potatoes to market do not mix varieties, and sort as evenly to one size as you can. Dealers like to handle and can sell better, goods that show some care and judgment on the part of the shipper.

Stiff clay soils are generally benefited by late fall plowing, from the freezing and thawing of the exposed rough surfaces, which will put them into a better condition to be well pulverized by the spring cultivation.

The farmer should no longer hire a gang to reap, a gang to bind and a gang to thresh with flails—machinery does it. He does not "chop, drop and cover" in planting cotton. Does not go five times in a row plowing cultivated crops.

Do not be afraid that grass left on the land will "smother" the roots beneath; remember that the packing of the earth around and over grass roots by tramping of cattle when the soil is soft, is much more likely to cause a smothering.

On land freshly fertilized with barnyard manure, wheat will not make a fine grain, according to Prof. A. E. Blount, because the manure has a tendency to make too much stalk and foliage, decidedly to the detriment of the grain.

Many things from a wheel-jack to a mowing machine, are seen where last used; wagons, parts of wagons, rakes, and rubbish block the way at every turn. This is not fair. What a commotion there would be in some households if the sitting-room of the house was in such continual confusion as the yard of the house!

As a help to successful general farming, obtain a good stand of grass in your rotation of corps (whatever they may be), which should not be more than three or four years apart; that is, have a good sod to turn under every three or four years.

Many New England farms have gone out of cultivation because of competition. Farmers have failed to make money farming land worth $150 per acre, when they must compete with western farmers on land worth $10 per acre. Diversification of crops will eventually right this.

A Florida correspondent of the California Fruit Grower, speaking of tobacco in Leon county, that state, says it is a comparatively new business in that part of the state, but promises well. From the 420 acres planted in the country, it is expected to cure at least 160,000 pounds, worth 25c per pound.

If the road tax was raised in money and placed in the hands of one or more agents who understood their business and had the entire supervision of the roads of a township, looking after them the entire season, making timely repairs as found necessary, a great improvement would soon be had, and in the end it would cost less than by the old method.

The new education demands that every man and woman, whether intending to follow a profession or an industrial calling, should be educated as broadly as possible and at the same time trained as thoroughly as possible in line with intended work or business. The host of agricultural colleges and hundreds of special schools make a good effort to supply the demand, in teaching men and women the sciences that apply to the business of the farm and the household.

The west is giving the legumes a great boom. While Henry Wallace, in Iowa, proudly calls himself a clover crank, and Prof. Georgeson, of the Kansas Experiment station, keeps talking Soy beans, Prof. Magruder, of the Oklahoma station, is preaching cow peas with all his might. This year he has every odd spot on the station farm planted to cow peas. This cow pea is quite a different plant, botanically and practically, from the Soy bean. While the latter grows straight and stiff, with the little woolly pod thickly set along the stock, this cow pea (Dolichos sinensis) rambles luxuriantly over the ground, carrying its long, smooth pods on long, erect peduncles standing high above the foliage.—F. A. Waugh, in Kansas Farmer.

AN INTERESTING CAREER.

Thrilling Adventures of a Young Southerner on Sea and Land.

Captain E. Maynard, who was born and reared in Clarksville, Tenn., but now of the Morgan line of steamships, although only 22 years of age, has had a career of thrilling interest. Captain Maynard was born in 1870, his father being route agent for the Southern Express company. In 1884, at the age of 14, young Maynard left his mothers and brothers and sisters—his father then being dead—and went to New York and confided to his uncle, H. P. Kirkham, his plans for becoming a sailor. His uncle secured a berth for him on a vessel bound for Africa.

After a year of uneventful sea life he shipped with a vessel going to Hong Kong, China. A storm overtook the ship near the Caroline islands and drove it against the reefs and it went down. It was near the islands and officers and crew all got ashore. The savage inhabitants met the sailors with yells, brandishing their implements of warfare, and the entire crew surrendered, expecting to be roasted or eaten alive. But instead they received kind treatment and were distributed among the savages. Maynard's fine appearance won the good-will of the king, or chief, and he was taken to his home. The king had a daughter, and in her company young Maynard was almost constantly thrown. When he had acquired sufficient knowledge of her language to understand the princess he began to make love to her, was received with favor by both daughter and father, and before long became the king's son-in-law.

The captives became reconciled to the natives' manner of living and some of them hunted while others fished. They lost all hope of ever getting back to civilization. About seven months after captivity, Maynard, with his friends, escaped in the boats they saved from their ship and made their way, 800 miles to Honolulu, after eight days of suffering. Soon after Maynard shipped on the steamer Aquan, a trader in the West Indies. He was wrecked, and he and the captain escaped in their boat. In a short time Maynard got a position on the Morgan line, which company he is now with, but was again wrecked with the ship Eldorado near the Bahamas.

A Reporter investigates several public recommendations, and finds

EVERY WORD TRUE.

More Words of Praise spoken than Published.

The strong letters of recommendation and experiences which have so frequently appeared in the various daily papers, excited the curiosity of the Editor of the Albany Argus. Determined to know as to the genuineness of the published documents, placed the matter in the hands of one of their reporters, Mr. Robert A. Male, the veteran foreman of VanSlyke & Horton's Tobacco Factory, on Broadway, Albany, N. Y., was first called upon, and shown the following:

"About ten years ago I had a great deal of trouble with stone in the bladder, and I had to submit to an operation. But the old trouble reappeared and I feared that another operation would be necessary. A friend suggested that I try Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y., after using the medicine a short while, I found it was doing me good. I continued its use and am happy to say it entirely cured me. I take it whenever I feel a little out of sorts, and it always does me good. But for kidney or urinary trouble of any kind I am a proof of its curative powers.

Mr. Male said every word was true and and he would not be without that valuable preparation.

Mr. F. C. Brink, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., whose famous experience published, as "A Scrap of Paper." Picking a scrap of paper up in the street one day, found it contained Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy advertisement, and as it particularly hit his case, bought the medicine and found the help he had been praying for.

Mr. F. C. Brink.

In answer as to the truth of the article, Mr. Brink said he was always pleased to say a good word for Favorite Remedy, and referred the writer to the following letter lately published in the Poughkeepsie Eagle.

Gentlemen:—Receiving many letters from all over the country, asking us to the truth of an advertisement printed in your paper, giving my experience with Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, I wish to say it was a pleasure to give that recommendation to Dr. Kennedy, and when I said I was cured of catarrh of the bladder and chronic kidney disease, I wrote simply the truth.

For years before I used this valuable medicine, I suffered from urinary troubles, pain in my back and a nervous, sleepless condition, yet before I had taken the fourth bottle I was cured, sound and well. I have replied to these letters and am willing to do similar service to those afflicted. But I make this public statement hoping it may reach the eye of the sufferer, and save me personal correspondence, for at my age letter writing is note easy.

Yours truly,
F. C. BRINK.
24 Thompson Street.

Mr. Peter Lawler, chief engineer of Messrs. Crane & Co's Paper Mill, Dalton, Mass., said:

"I don't look much like a dead man, but I was pretty near one. For fifteen years I suffered pains in my side, my urine was subject to violent stoppages, and often tinged with blood. I lost flesh, appetite, and strength. I consulted several physicians who said I was suffering from gravel and inflamation of the kidneys and that I could live but a short time. Mr. John Spencer of Pittsfield, learning of my condition, said "don't bother with the doctors, take Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and be cured." I at once sent for the same, and had taken only part of the bottle, when two pieces of stone passed my bladder, and now am entirely well. Costiveness and rheumetism trouble me no more, and I feel like a new man. Thanks entirely to Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

Mr. Peter Lawler.

Mr. E. D. Parsons, head book-keeper Wholesale Dry Goods House of S. J. Arnold & Co., Rochester, N. Y., had a similar experience. Seized one day with pain in his back, next came stoppage of urine. Medical advise was sought, and pronounced it stone in the bladder. In writing to a friend he says:

Mr. E. D. Parsons.

"I suffered beyond words to describe. None of the means taken produced any benefit, until I began the use of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy which dissolved the stone, the symptoms began to yield, the pain ceased and from this time my recovery was complete. Can I after this experience speak too highly of that which saved my life?"

"I can speak in higher praise than I have written," are the words of every person I talked with, which proves the great popularity of this remedy, possesesing what no other medicine has, the power to save life. It can be used with safety by all ages.

The worst cases of nervous prostration, sleeplessness, headaches and digestive troubles, yield to its curative power. Salt rheum, eczema, rheumatism, scrofula, or any disease arising from impure blood, are banished by this brain, nerve and blood tonic, Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.
